A Mausoleum Cheap
No Art in Our Day
Judge Gary's Strong Grip

—By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright, 1922, Star Company.)

A TWO-CENT STAMP will take your letter all around the earth. It will take your message on dog sleds to a Far North Esquimaux village, or down across the Equator, and up to the top of the Andes, where the condor sails slowly. For two cents this government will take your message to the south end of Patagonia, where the Canoe Indians live and shiver, or to Shanghai in China, or to our naval hospital at Yokohama in Japan.

Tell that to your friend who says "Government management and ownership can never be a success." The government owns the post office. Can you imagine a privately-owned concern taking your message around the world for two cents? The private company charges you 25 cents to go twenty blocks.

Mrs. Wiesen, eighty years old, tells the court: "My husband was rich and wanted a fine tomb. I built him a $25,000 mausoleum, and added a statue of Grief. Now, poor and old, I ask permission to move my husband and sell his mausoleum."

That's interesting because it's new. But only a "speculator" would buy the second-hand mausoleum. Anyone foolish enough to "show off" in second-hand finery after death would expect old Mr. Wiesen's ghost to return and haunt the new tenant of his tomb. One ghost haunting another would make a bad situation.

The English worry needlessly about "art treasures" coming here. Gold replaces their art treasures and plenty are kept in museums to stimulate artistic youth—the only useful thing art treasures can do.

Whether a Rembrandt hangs in the old dining room of an English fox-hunting nobleman, who never looks at it, or in the new dining room of an American money king who wants "to own it," makes no difference.

It isn't things you have collected that count, but things you are producing.

Rich men here and in England should do what the Medici family did and the Popes did, when they encouraged production by such men as Michael Angelo, Leonardo, Raphael and others.

Michael Angelo showed the foolishness of antique are collections when he made his little marble statue in the Greek style. He buried it to make it look "antique," dug it up and shipped it to an artistic cardinal. The latter recognized its antique value, warned Michael Angelo to tell no one he found it, and he would come and dig for more. Michael Angelo told him he had made it himself and could save him the trouble of digging by making others.

It is not probable that our material industrial age could under any circumstances produce art really worth while. The human race, like an individual, does only one thing well at a time. And this is the scientific industrial age. However, it is surprising that with any amount of money to buy old things our

Accomplish in 2 Weeks What Once Required Centuries

GREAT TRIUMPH FOR CIVILIZATION

Mr. and Mrs. Sutter Overcome Untold Hardships in the Maine Woods

By C. J. OBERLY.

Howe Brook, Me., June 3.—In two weeks Adam and Eve Sutter have accomplished more than the common ancestors of humanity were able to accomplish in 100,000 years.

They entered the Maine wilderness near here two weeks ago without clothes and with nothing but their bare hands to fight for a living.

In this respect they were just as helpless as were the Neanderthal type of men who prevailed in Europe for ages that make all history seem a thing of yesterday. But the Sutters were equipped with sets of brains representing the combined thought and study and invention of humanity through all the ages.

The Sutters knew. In these two weeks they have gotten themselves food, clothing, weapons and fire. It took the first men something more than 100,000 years to find these things so that they could be sure of them.

PERISHED BY MILLIONS.

Science does not know when the first true men arose out of some more apelike progenitor, but science has proven that it took them hundreds of centuries to acquire skill of hand and limb and power and bulk of brain and that during this testing time they perished by the millions, the prey of wild animals.

But the Sutters plunged into the Maine wilderness with bodies not as able to withstand the hardships of such a life as the bodies of primitive men. The physical make-up of the Sutters was the make-up of civilization. They were soft and weak in comparison with the gorilla-like monsters with cunning brains, shambling hairy bodies and strong teeth, who were the ancestors of humanity. But the Sutters have proven that the trained mind is superior to the thick-muscled body. They have known what to do with themselves and have done it well.

History records also that the first men lived in a mild and pleasant climate, that they followed the sun in their wanderings and that they subsisted largely on a luxuriant vegetation long before they became proficient or bold enough to kill other animals for food.

The Sutters deliberately picked out one of the most desolate spots

Ulster's Test Time Has Come, Asserts Craig

London, June 3.

IN an interview with the newspaper people, Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier, last night said: "The testing time for Ulster has come; it may be that testing time for England also has come. If we go down, our flag goes down with us."

In the present stand Ulster is taking, Sir James asserted: "We are fighting not only our own cause, but the cause of Great Britain."

POLICE TAKE IN WEE 'BOY BLUE'

Police Captain John Driscoll of East Dedham Street Station last night recruited a new member of the force for the time being in the the person of two and a half year old "Little Boy Blue" found early in the afternoon nonchalantly bathing in the small pond in Blackstone Park.

The youngster could not tell the officer that found him who he was or where he lived, so off to the station house he was carried. He arrived at a busy hour and was placed in the signal room while the superiors sent officers on the way to beats.

After finishing the roll call assignments, Captain Driscoll strolled into the signal room and found the youngster thoroughly amused by the workings of the system and quite content with his new surroundings.

The child is about two and a half years old, with very light hair, blue eyes, pink cheeks and dressed in light blue overalls with a white shirt. He was carrying a small sail boat when found.

POLITE YOUTH IS SOUGHT AS THIEF

Edward E. Sparhawk, an elderly man of No. 39 Worcester street, South End, was overjoyed last evening to find a young man who was polite.

The young man bumped into Sparhawk as he passed through a street car near Northampton street. He bowed and apologized profusely.

Sparhawk left the car at Northampton street. As he alighted he felt in his pocket for his wallet. It was gone. About $50 and some valuable papers were in it.

LILLIAN RUSSELL IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 3.—Suffering from a complication of diseases believed to have been caused by a slight injury on shipboard while returning from her recent European tour, Mrs. Alexander P. Moore, formerly Lillian Russell, the famous actress, is in a critical condition at her home. Her illness reached a crisis this morning, according to Dr. L. W. Swope. He said tonight her condition had improved slightly and he has strong hope of her recovery.

NEW WIFE IS LOYAL TO HOLLIS

Will Return to Ex-Senator in Europe, She Tells Concord Friends

"LEGALLY WED? OF COURSE I AM!"

Unperturbed by "Bigamous Marriage" Talk, Defends Her Husband

By KATHERINE A. DONOVAN.

Concord, N. H., June 3.—In smiling defiance of all stoney-hearted authorities who look askance on the legality of her marriage to former United States Senator Harry F. Hollis, Mrs. Anne Hobbs Hollis, second wife of the Senator, proudly asserts her complete loyalty to her husband, and her conviction that she is his rightful wife, both here and abroad.

"Legally married? Well, indeed I am," the vivacious wife declared, "and certainly I think my husband knew that our marriage was unquestionably according to law."

Once again on her native soil, her own home as well as that of the Senator and his first wife, Grace B. Fisher Hollis, the "second bride" goes her unperturbed way among her hosts of friends and relatives.

FASHIONABLY ATTIRED.

Mrs. Hollis is tall and of strikingly fashionable appearance. When first approached by an Advertiser reporter, she wore a gray knitted morning gown of obvious Parisian origin, with a vivid scarf and sport hat of Emerald green. Her gray suede sport shoes and thick silk hose harmonized attractively. Later, when she accompanied the Advertiser reported to the office of her attorney, Robert W. Murchie, she had completely changed her garb to an ultra-Parisian street frock of dark blue georgette, with a dark blue feathered hat and luxurious fur neckpiece.

"I am here on business that requires my presence," she stated in the presence of Mr. Murchie.

"Any rumor that I have left Senator Hollis, or that I am making a move to desert him, is absolutely false. I never thought of such a thing."

"Moreover, I plan to return to Paris in September. Senator Hollis will continue his law practice there, and we will enjoy continental life together. That will prove that I have not been frightened away by all these rumors of a false marriage."

AHORS PUBLICITY.

Mrs. Hollis, greeting friends and acquaintances as she made her way along the street, declared that she was happy to be at home again after her nerve-racking hours following the sensation created by her marriage.

"I abhor all that publicity—I don't like it," she sighed. "I just haven't said anything. I've let people think what they would. Senator Hollis was prominent, and that was the cause of the trouble."

Although Mrs. Hollis did not confirm the rumor, friends assert that there is a possibility that Senator Hollis may pay a brief visit to New Hampshire during the Summer.

50 NAMED AS LOVE VICTIMS

Aviator Slain by Nurse Had 5 N. E. Girls Listed in Diary

SHE FINDS IT; KILLS HIM, WOUNDS SELF

Near Death She Sobs Out Story of Tragic Romance

Kansas City, Mo., June 3.—Miss Marie "Peggy" Beal shot and killed Frank Warren Anderson this afternoon in the Midwest Hotel, because he was a "love devil" and "too perfect a lover."

As the body of Anderson, former aviator and big business man, crumpled on the floor, Miss Beal, a war nurse, pointed the gun at her own heart and pulled the trigger. She is in General Hospital, hovering between life and death, with a bullet in her side.

She had killed her sweetheart to save the souls of 50 women, whose names she had found in his diary. They numbered women from 12 different cities, and were, she said, his love victims. New England women mentioned as being contained in Andrew's list of acquaintances:

May Trotter of Gloucester, Gertrude Nelson, Winifred Bishop, Helen Dyer, all of Boston, and Addie Clements of Uniontown, N. H.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE.

Fighting for her life on a little cot in General Hospital, "Peggy" Beal panted out the story of her blighted romance, a story of deception by the man to whom she had given her all.

"I killed him because I wanted to save other women's hearts," gasped the girl as her eyes welled with tears. "I had a heart capable of love, and I did love Warren, but when he told me he was a 'love devil' and I found out I was the last of his fifty victims, it was too much."

"Peggy" Beal, tiny, attractive, with jet black, bobbed hair and eyes of mingled love and hate for the man she had slain, told the story of her romance with her super-lover aviator.

"We met and we loved. He was the most perfect lover—the most wonderful of men. He asked me to be his wife and I came to him here in Kansas City, last February.

"After a time he made a confession to me that nearly made me loose my faith in him. He told me that he was married. But he said he was separated from his wife and that a divorce was pending.

"But I loved him—I said I would wait for him. So I returned to my work in the open-air hospital in Springfield to wait the day when he would be mine.

LETTERS WRECKED LOVE.

Valentino Honeymoon Spent in Silk Pajamas

Rudolph Valentino, "great lover" of the screen, and his second bride, Winifred Hudnut, of New York.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 3.—Dainty silk garments, two suits, one of white and one of purple, were introduced today as exhibits in the preliminary hearing of Rodolph Valentino, actor, on a charge of bigamy.

They were presented as the attire in which Valentino and his second bride, Miss Winifred Hudnut, whom he married in Mexicali, Mexico, May 13, appeared at a Palm Springs resort during their honeymoon.

It was left to judicial determination as to what the articles were, the prosecution contending that they were pajamas, while the attorneys for Valentino declared they were Chinese silk suits. They were identified, however, by Mrs. Alva Hicks of Palm Springs as the apparel in which the honeymooners appeared.

Justice Haney took the case under advisement until Monday.

Dr. Floretta White of Palm Springs testified to having attended the Mexicali wedding ceremony and of the bridal couple arriving at Palm Springs shortly after midnight. She said they went to a cottage occupied by Mme. Alla Nazimova, Russian dancer and screen actress, but later returned to the doctor's cottage for the night.

Valentino occupied a room with Douglas Gerard, motion picture actor and beau man, and the bride occupied a separate room, according to the doctor. She said the bride was ill.

Valentino will know Monday whether he must face a jury on a charge of bigamy. Justice of the Peace Haney so announced after the preliminary hearing.

EXPEDITION TO POLE STARTS

Seattle, Wash., June 3 (By A. P.)—The auxiliary powered Schooner Maud, bearing the Amundsen Polar Basin scientific expedition, sailed from Seattle at 3.40 o'clock this afternoon for Nome, Alaska, on the first leg of a five-year voyage through the Arctic ice packs.

Captain Oscar Wisting, sailing master of the Maud, commanded the vessel. Roald Amundsen, chief of the expedition, proceeded to Nome by steamer.

PASSENGER PLANE WRECKED; 3 KILLED

Folk Stone, Eng., June 3.—(By The Associated Press.) A French airplane flying from the air station at Croydon, near London, bound for Paris, fell into the English Channel today.

The pilot and two passengers were killed. The passengers were Gordon Ley, an Englishman, and Paul Carroll, a Paris businessman.

HUNDREDS TRAPPED WHEN DAM BREAKS

Scranton, Pa., June 3.—Hundreds of persons are marooned tonight in buildings at Simpson and Carbondale by the bursting of a big dam of the Erie Railroad Company at Burnwood. The rush of the water down the mountainside caused damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Paris, June 3.—Shirley Kellogg, returning from America on the same boat as her husband, Albert De Courville, rushed to Paris and filed suit for divorce.

RUSH TO ULSTER BORDER

Recapture of Belleek Salient Believed to Be Objective

IS NOW OCCUPIED BY REPUBLICANS

Airplanes and Heavy Guns Accompany Troops to Front

Belfast, June 3 (By the Associated Press).—Large parties of British troops, fully equipped, left Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, this afternoon, for the border. They traveled in military and commandeered lorries.

Many machine guns were taken along. Kitchen outfits accompanied them, and the troops evidently were prepared for a long stay.

Forces in Northern Ireland were reinforced today by twelve officers and ninety-seven men of other ranks of the Royal Air Force. They were followed by twelve fighting planes.

A battery of Howitzers also was landed.

TROOPSHIPS ARRIVE.

Two transports arrived from Birkenhead with the Scottish Borderers. The Manchesters are due tomorrow from Guernsey. The Royal Fusiliers and Liverpool Regiment also are coming. They are proceeding to the Ballykinder Camp, County Down.

The most important naval unit yet sent is the flotilla leader Wallace, sister ship of the Brooks. The Warwick, which is patrolling Lough Foyle, was the flagship of Roger Keyes in the Zeebrugge raid.

It is believed that the recapture of the Belleek Salient recently seized by Irish Republican army forces is contemplated.

The Ulster Association issued a manifesto today assuring the citizens that the authorities were taking a serious view of the tendency to looting that had been manifested in one or two districts recently and adding:

"The Ulster constabulary, who take control this week, will discharge their obligations with efficiency and impartiality. Looting must be stamped out at all costs."

A large party of official Irish Republican army forces marched from its headquarters in Sligo today and took possession of the town hall there. Sentries were posted preventing the entrance of unauthorized persons. The seizure is believed to be connected with the coming elections.

BOMBS WRECK STORES.

Bombs were thrown this morning into three shops at Letterkenny, County Donegal. All three places were wrecked.

What had evidently been a snipers' stronghold, was uncovered in Belfast, when crown forces invaded a house in Carrick Hill and discovered in the attic rifles, revolvers, grenades and ammunition. The walls were loop-holed, and a barrel of gasoline and several bicycles gave rise to the belief that these were a part of the equipment of organized incendiaries.

Bank of Templemore Robbed of £2,000

Dublin, June 3.—Three men today held up the Provincial Bank at Templemore, near Thurles, and got away with $2000 in cash.

Dublin witnessed a spectacle omitted for many years—that of 1,000 British troops stationed in the city paraded in Phoenix Park in a revival of the annual observance of the King's birthday.

Notwithstanding the number of men on parade, it was declared that only 200 men had been drawn from each battalion and other units, three brigades being represented in the review.

This was the first time a review had been held since 1914. Major Sir Nevil MacCready, commander of the forces in Ireland, was the inspecting officer.

While the parade was in progress machines from the air force detachment maneuvered above the reviewing grounds.

POSSES' SEARCH FOR MISSING MAN FUTILE

Boothbay Harbor, Me., June 3.—Posses that have been scouring the woods, ponds and swamps for William Seavey, a prominent business man of this town, missing from home since Sunday, have failed to find any trace of the man's whereabouts. Officials who have been conducting an investigation in the man's disappearance, stated that he had been in ill health and might have wandered away from home in a temporary illness. Mr. Seavey is married and has a son and daughter. He was prominent in many lodges.

RUMANIAN QUEEN HONORS COL. BOYLE

Paris, June 3.—The "Uncrowned King of Rumania," Colonel "Klondyke" Boyle, is about to be given the title of Baron at the request of Queen Marie.

Since the war, when Boyle obtained rights in Rumanian oil properties, he has greatly interested the Queen. It is reported that Boyle practically runs Rumania's finances.

Boyle is known as the "Morgan" of the Balkans.

HUNGARIANS REJECT AMERICAN MONEY

Budapest, June 3.—American Minister Brenton has warned the Hungarian public against money changers who refuse American banknotes of the buffalo and Indian head issues.

Prejudice against these notes seems to be based on the theory that, since the Indians and buffaloes are nearly extinct, the banknotes must be obsolete.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF ALLEGED BANDITS

Trial of Albert Safdia and Joseph A. Vincenten, alleged members of the Wakefield bandit gang, accused of robbing Curley Bros. grain store, Wakefield, February 13, 1921, was postponed in Cambridge Superior Court to give the State another day to prepare evidence.

richest men spend so little encouraging production in their own day.

Important "independent" steel manufacturers admit that they exist only "by grace of the big United States Steel Corporation." That company, with its railways, coal, ore and, incidentally, with Judge Gary's extraordinarily able management, has the little companies at its mercy, being able to manufacture iron for $5 a ton less than any other company.

In this column at intervals for years past those that gable in steel stocks have been warned to keep away from little companies and told the time the big company could sell at a profit for less than it costs little companies to manufacture.

Evidence before the Lockwood Committee officially confirms that warning. What saves the little steel men is the fact that Judge Gary nurses them along, not wanting the big company to be put in the position of dominating the nation. But he won't live for ever, and if a price war ever comes, heaven help the little fellows.

Gifford Pinchot shouldn't waste time defending his spending of ninety thousand dollars to beat the Republican machine in Pennsylvania. He rendered a service and broke the machine.

The machine candidate says he spent only eveien hundred dollars. Perhaps tha tis all he contributed. But the amount spent in the vain effort to nominate him for Governor, was the total that the State pays to public officials controlled by the machine, and in addition the amount distributed, judiciously, by corporations that use and support the machine.

No citizen could do better than use his money to break up a corrupt political organiz^tion as Pinchot has done. Preventing the spending of money in that way are dangerous, for the machine will always know how to spend AND HIDE IT.

Europe criticises us for not calling off our European debts. All the countries, big and little, denounce us, but they need not.

Let each one that chooses, openly, bluntly, repudiate its debts. They know that we shall not go to war about money. Our little group of patriots would get more out of their dear United States in the first two months of war than we could possibly get from our debts.

Repudiation is the open and plain course for European nations that don't want to pay. That would let us know how they feel and be a useful guide in future lending operations.

GRAVE WAR CRISIS IS MENACING PEACE OF ALL EUROPE, DECLARES GIBBS

Political Contest at Genoa Parley Revealed "Extremely Thin Crust Which Covers the Red Hot Fires," Says Noted Author, Who Tells of Secret Plans for Battle

By PHILIP GIBBS

London, June 3.—So far from giving new hope to the European peoples and promising a new era of peace and reconstruction, the Genoa conference, which was summoned to attain those objects, left behind a general sense of apprehension and alarm.

I think most people in Europe today who think at all seriously of problems bigger than their own little life in home and business are profoundly disturbed by what happened at Genoa.

We all hoped and believed that the spirit of men in favor of racial peace was coming down. It seemed likely that a reasonable arrangement for mutual benefit would be made between nations who were enemies in war.

The cost, the ruin, the futility of war seemed to have taught such hard lessons to victor and vanquished alike that there was a reasonable chance of substituting arbitration and agreement for armed force.

THIN CRUST OVER FIRE.

But the political struggle at Genoa has revealed sharply the extremely thin crust which covers the red hot fires in the heart of Europe.

The conflict between sets of ideas at Genoa resulted not in victory for peace, but in a temporary truce which in itself was a public avowal that we are again threatened with a renewal of war and preparations for war.

Lloyd George's supporters have made out a good case for this truce of God, as he calls it, which he brought back from Genoa, as the only fruit of his labors, and, indeed, every fair-minded man and women should acknowledge the splendid courage, patience and skill with which that little David overthrew the old Goliath of the war spirit in Europe.

He risked, perhaps lost, his political supremacy in Great Britain by that adventure.

But the plain man in the street in France as well as England is unsatisfied with that plan for a temporary truce. On the contrary the plain man is astonished and dismayed that any such truce is necessary.

He thought peace was already made. He believed that the spirit of peace was settling down for a long spell. Now he is told Europe has been saved from fresh war for a few months.

SECRET WAR PLANS.

That assurance does not fill him with any joy. It is a cause for uneasy, anxious, brooding anticipations of some second Armageddon now being prepared for him by secret and moving forces over which he has no control, but of which survey he will be the victim.

This German-Russian alliance opens a new vista of horror. This terrence threat of invading Germany is repeated daily in the French press, if Germany defaults payment, perhaps beginning a new catastrophe, making future war more certain.

Nagging quarrels and interferences, in the British view, is not ended by emotional assertions of love and friendship between private individuals or public characters in both countries.

It is true to say the failure of the Genoa Conference and its revelations of hostile policies have shocked all classes of men and women and raised new fears in their imagination.

I cannot help thinking personally that Soviet Russia hasn't given a fair deal. I say that not because I have any sympathy with Bolshevism but because I hate Bolshevism and I would therefore like to see the adoption of a policy which will speed up its dissolution in Russia.

It wasn't sufficiently recognized at Genoa Conference nor by public opinion outside that Tchitcherin and his followers as delegates had to play somewhat to the political gallery in Moscow or rather to the party machine just as Barthou and Lloyd George had to play to theirs.

MUST HAVE CREDIT.

They still had pretended faith in communistic ideals whereas communism is already abandoned in Russia to the extent of ninety-eight per cent. In return for that two per cent. of Bolshevist heresy they were willing to come to terms with the rest of Europe.

If that had happened peace would be more certain. For example, they proposed the demobilization of the Red army in a general scheme for the pacification of Europe. In discussion that offer was immediately sharply opposed by France; why, on what grounds?

Soviet insistence on a European loan of $1,000,000,000 is double impossible, for reasons which Mr. Hoover had plainly pointed out. No governments could go to their people with such a proposition that some international scheme of credits is not only possible, but necessary if the Russian people are to be given any chance of recovery.

I even venture to disagree with Mr. Hoover that Russian salvation lies within herself and not from without. It is impossible for Russia to recover, whatever eternal reforms are carried out, unless she gets credit. She cannot re-establish industry unless she obtains foreign plants and machinery. She cannot get her railway system running without engines from Germany, Britain and the United States.

She cannot even get back to her normal output in agriculture, apart altogether from drought and famine, unless she receive quantities of spades, plows, reaping machines.

It would be good business for Europe to supply these things on a system of credit. Revived trade would fertilize industry and trade of other countries.

Mr. Hoover refers to small shares of exports to Russia from the United States, but indirectly America could benefit enormously from Russian recovery, because that would raise the purchasing power of Europe generally.

The American Relief Committees are doing a marvelous work of charity in Russia, without which millions would perish, but charity is only a temporary expedient.

To prevent future famine, further need of charity, it is necessary to help the Russian people produce and develop their natural resources.

I have no patience with the commission of experts appointed to investigate conditions in Russia. Those conditions are perfectly known. Reports of the British trade mission cover the whole field of economic inquiry. The United States has kept well informed by Mr. Goodrich, his governor of Indiana, whose judgment is unassailable.

TYRANNY ABANDONED.

All these reports go to prove that the Soviet government has abandoned many of its old methods of tyranny and is gradually reforming itself from within by casting out extremists and adopting moderate counsels.

It is acknowledged by all shades of opinion that any violent overthrow of the present government would lead only to new agonies and terrors. And it is plainly shown that foreign credits are necessary to resuscitate Russian life.

My contention and belief is that if the European powers had acted together instead of with separate secret reveiries, they could have obtained decent security from Russian delegates in return for aid.

I cannot blame Germany altogether for making a separate agreement, though it was a political blunder in the way it happened. I know personally that so long as a year ago Germany was eager to avoid acting alone regarding Russia, and made a definite offer of cooperation with Great Britain and France.

I discussed that proposal at great length with Herr Stresemann, leader of the German People's party, in close touch with Stinnes and industrial power.

That offer of co-operation was refused, so now Germany is left alone to do her dealings with Russia and constitutes a very grave danger to the rest of Europe.

COULD HAVE BEEN SOLVED.

The effect of refusing all dealings with Soviet Russia except on a basis of charity seems fantastically absurd if at the same time every nation screams with jealousy when some other nation or group of financial adventurers obtain concession for oil or other natural resources still existing in ruined Russia.

One cannot have it both ways. If there is nothing to be got out of Russia, they why all this rage about oil" If it is not good business to deal with Russia, then why prevent Germany from making a trade agreement?

The truth of the matter is that the Russian problem could have been solved easily and Bolshevism killed as a menace to the Western world, if the French, British and German delegates had acted together on business principles instead of dancing round the Russian bear with alternate taunts and cajoleries, afraid of the beast.

France wanted to use it as a bogey to her people. Germany, though more afraid of Bolshevism than any country in Europe, foresees the day when, if French pressure continues, she will want the Russian bear with all its sharpest claws.

I could not explain. He was cold, indifferent, and openly neglected me. And I knew why. I knew the truth. Seated in our hotel room, he bared his inner soul to me. He told me he had decided he was not going to divorce his wife after all. And when I had recovered from the shock of the cold, bare truth, I told him I had been deceived by him.

"He told me he had wanted to be fair; that I was the best pal that he had ever had, but that he simply couldn't help it—he was a devil—that's all.

FOUND HIS DIARY.

"He was writing that night—I don't know what night it was—my memory has failed me there.

"I asked him what he was writing. He refused to tell me. But the next day I went through his trunk. It was sort of a diary. I read it.

"Was ever a man in such a vortex of swirling hearts as I, he had written.

"'What does this mean?' I asked.

"He told me then.

"Then he showed me a list he was writing, a list of fifty women's names. He told me that they were 'the other women'—the women of whom I was the last. He told me of them one by one, of their hair, their eyes, their personalities.

"It was then I decided. I vowed my heart was the last one he would break. And he will never break another. I believe in my heart, which is dead, that I did an act of humanity when I killed him.

"His wife will turn on me. The wife always turns on the woman in the triangle of eternity. And my only regret is that my alm for my heart was not true.

"I can't remember any event of the tragic hour of the shooting, my mind is a blank."

"CONFESSION" IN NOTE.

On the dresser of the hotel room, this note was found:

"My name is Peggy Beal. I am 29 years of age. I live in Springfield, Ill. I came to Kansas City with the intention of marrying Frank Warren Anderson. When I arrived I met him and we went to the Midwest Hotel together.

"He told me he was married and that he was not divorced yet. Therefore he could not marry me.

"There is nothing more to tell. I shot him because he brought me here and could not marry me.

(Signed) "PEGGY BEAL"

Beside the note were these verses:

The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
And yet the light of the bright world dies,
With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.

"THE HALL OF DOOM."

Nearby was a book opened at a chapter, "The Hall of Doom," with the picture of a woman, a dagger in her hand, standing beside the body of a slain man.

The chapter began: "The room was empty save for herself and the still form of him—Jeddak of Lothar—lying there at her feet."

Physicians at General Hospital, fighting for the girl's life, said tonight she might recover, owing to prompt medical treatment.

In Springfield, Ill., "Peggy" had been employed for the last five months as a nurse in the Open Air Colony.

She had left after telling other nurses that she was going to Kansas City to be married. Previous to her coming to Springfield she had resided with her parents in Dayton, O.

Anderson, a local business man of importance, first met the girl when he was at a ground school near Dayton, O., and while she was a member of the Army Nurse Corps.

The parents of the dead girl have been notified and will leave to claim the body in the morning.

HARVARD CURBS WAR ON JEWS

Faculty Refuses to Permit Commission to Draw Race Line

The faculty of Harvard College, at a secret meeting voted to bring to a halt the furore aroused by the alleged campaign against admission of Jews to the famous institution by voting not to give the admissioning board more powers as planned.

The hubbub was all brought about, it was learned, by the desire of President A. Lawrence Lowell, his cousin, Dr. Richard C. Cabot and Roger B. Merriman, professor of history, to enlarge the powers of the admissioning board, giving it greater liberty in the matter of admitting or rejecting prospective students.

That it was aimed directly at Jews is a charge that has been frequently hurled, but which the matter became a public scandal.

It was only through a leak that the plan quietly made reached the newspapers.

DELAYED INDEFINITELY.

Action now is postponed indefinitely.

At a conference with B. Loring Young, speaker of the House of Representatives, yesterday, at the speaker's office in the State House, President Lowell informed Mr. Young that the faculty had voted that a special committee be appointed by the president to consider principles and methods for more effectively sifting candidates for admission. He made no mention of the faculty's action in voting not to enlarge the powers of the admissioning board. He refused to b: interviewed as he left the State House.

"I never give interviews," he said as he hurried away.

Speaker Young said the interview with President Lowell came at the college president's request.

TO BLOCK INVESTIGATION.

"President Lowell called upon me," said Mr. Young, "because of the fact that certain orders had been presented to the House of Representatives asking for an investigation of some proposed change in the method of admitting students to Harvard University. He informed me of the faculty meeting and asked that the president appoint the special committee for the sifting of candidates for admission.

"In my opinion most of the discussion has been based upon idle rumors."

There was much comment in State House circles upon President Lowell's visit with Speaker Young and if it was for the purpose of heading off any proposed Legislative investigation.

MR. HEARST TALKS WITH IRISH CHIEFS

Meets Griffith, Collins During Busy Week in British Capital

By ROBERT J. PREW,
Universal Service Correspondent.

London, June 3.—During a busy week in London, William Randolph Hearst had a long talk on the Irish situation with Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, and Michael Collins, head of the provisional government of Ireland.

Mr. Griffith and Mr. Collins were here conducting negotiations with the British government arising out of the developments of the treaty situation.

Mr. Hearst was received by delegates at the Metropole Hotel. With him was Mrs. Hearst, who is partly of Irish extraction, and who takes a deep personal interest in the Irish cause.

Before calling on Mr. Griffith and Mr. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Hearst were entertained at luncheon by the British Prime Minister, with whom was his daughter, Miss Megan Lloyd George.

The party was given at No. 10 Downing street, the historic home of British Premiers, and was an informal affair, at which Mr. and Mrs. Hearst met several distinguished British men and women.

Friday Ambassador and Mrs. Harvey entertained Mr. and Mrs. Hearst at a luncheon. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Hearst had Sir Thomas Lipton to dinner at the Savoy Hotel.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Hearst were the guests of Lord Beaverbrook, former minister, and one of the leading publishers in Britain, at his country home at Leatherhead in the beautiful Surrey Hills. Here Mr. and Mrs. Hearst met Andrew Bonar Law, famous statesman, who led the Conservative wing in the coalition government until his retirement through ill health last year. Mr. Bonar Law is now much improved in health and is expected to take an active part in Imperial politics.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Hearst, with her two sons, William and John, was conducted over the Houses of Parliament by the Lord Chancellor (Lord Birkenhead). The Houses were not in session, as they had adjourned Thursday for the Whitsuntide recess.

BALLOON HITS EXPRESS CLIP

Milwaukee, Wis., June 3.—Lieutenant W. F. Reed, navy pilot, and the last of the thirteen airmen to leave Milwaukee in the national air race last Wednesday, was reported in dispatches to the Wisconsin Aero Club, to have landed Friday in the Ozark Mountains in Southern Missouri.

The United States Coast Guard service announced tonight that Lieutenant Reed had covered 335 miles, making him third in the race and one of the American contenders in the international event at Geneva.

By Universal Service.

Quebec, Can., June 3.—Details of the thrilling flight of Major Oscar Westover, of the United States Army, probable winner of the great balloon race which started in Milwaukee on Wednesday, were revealed today.

He made a successful landing at St. Johns river after going 311 miles in eighteen hours. His balloon was carried at express speed by an eighty-mile gale and the atmosphere was so heavy that he and his assistants could not see the landscape below.

"In our attempt to make a record flight," Maj. Westover said today, "we threw overboard our camping outfit, our radio set and all our emergency paraphernalia. We had nothing else to cast over and were sagging perceptibly when the lake loomed up. As it looked too broad for the balloon to cross, we decided to descend as quickly as possible. We landed in the tree tops and scrambled to the ground.

"We flew high at all times, at night maintaining an altitude of 10,000 feet and in the daytime about 15,000 feet. The action of the sun distended the bag, taking it higher in the day time.

LEE GIRL HOUNDED BY SUITOR

Turk Chases Her From Boston to Illinois; Is Seized There

Violent Wooer of Miss Helen Wurtzbach Now Faces Deportation

Chicago, June 3.—A fantastic story of the pursuit of the modern college girl by a man from Constantinople, in far off Turkey, thoroughly imbued with belief in the possessive right of a dominant male to a chosen woman, was disclosed today in the placid village of Oak Park.

The bizarre tale was given to the Boston Advertiser by the pursued young woman, Helen Wurtzbach, twenty-four, daughter of Carl Wurtzbach, wealthy resident of Lee, Mass. As she unfolded the story, the pursuer, John Tarzos, son of a rich importer of Constantinople, was held at the Oak Park police station waiting action by the United States immigration officials.

YIELD OR DIE, HE SAYS.

Threats of violence — even of death—were made to the girl, she asserted, unless she complied with Tarzos' wish to accompany him to Turkey, where already other native women awaited his return.

Tarzos met Miss Wurtzbach in October, 1920, while she was acting as librarian at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston and he was a student there. He was sent to the United States three years ago to supplement his old world education.

Since then he has followed her, imploring her at times to flee with him, at other times threatening her with death, and declaring a mystic society of Orientals to which he belonged would wreak vengeance on her if she had him deported.

To escape his violent advances Miss Wurtzbach last November left Massachusetts and came to live with friends, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Morse, 413 South Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park. To occupy her mind, she became an assistant in the Oak Park Public Library.

Thither the ardent Tarzos pursued her, obtaining her address by a decoy letter, sent to her parents' home back in Lee, Mass.

There was a violent scene in the library when Tarzos found her. Under a flood of imprecations hurled at her in English, Greek and Turkish, the girl collapsed. Other young women attendants ran for the police and the man was led away, shouting frantically he would be revenged.

PURSUED HER ON STREET.

"After meeting Tarzos," Miss Wurtzbach explained, "I accompanied him to a violin recital by Fritz Kreisler in Boston. In returning home he impressed me with his queer philosophy of the dominances of man over woman. The Turkish attitude seemed to him eminently proper.

"He annoyed me with his talk and I avoided him after that night. But he neglected his classes to follow me, halting me in the street, waiting outside my apartment. Whenever I asked him to stop, he grew violent and began the threats. He said he would take me to Turkey and kill me.

"I grew frightened and returned home to my parents, but he followed me. My father met him on the street and demanded an explanation. He told he wanted to take me to Constantinople, although in all his advances he never asked me to be his wife.

"On the contrary, he showed me a photograph of a very beautiful Turkish girl, who he said was the woman he really loved and to whom he would return.

ERRATIC, BUT SANE.

"I finally had him examined by psycopathic authorities in Boston. They admitted his conduct was erratic, but said he was not insane, and he was released.

"Fearing the man would carry out his threats, I decided to leave Boston, and came here to Mr. and Mrs. Morse. He obtained my address by sending a letter to my father, signed with a woman's name."

Tarzos is held on technical charges of threats to commit violence and disorderly conduct. Monday the case will be investigated by the immigration officials, with a view to deportation proceedings.

OPENS FIRE ON HARDING IN SENATE

Trying to 'Stifle' Press on Daugherty Issue, Stanley Asserts

By Universal Service.

Washington, June 3.—Charges that President Harding is using his office "to stifle if not muzzle the press" in connection with the criticisms in Congress of Attorney-General Daugherty were made in the Senate today by Senator Stanley, Democrat, of Kentucky.

Then assailing the Attorney-General directly, Senator Stanley referred to "the nefarious and crooked operations of a political broker who makes it a business, it is charged, at least, to deceive the Chief Magistrate of the United States, in order that men may despoil women in time of peace and plunder the Treasury in time of war."

The Kentucky Senator was aroused by published reports today that in his conference with newspaper correspondents at the White House yesterday, President Harding had denounced those who have criticised the Attorney-General, and appealed to the press to "put on the brakes."

Senator Stanley shouted: "I say to the President this is not Austria, this is not Russia. 'Putting on the brakes' is the next thing to putting on a muzzle, and the statement is an infield threat to the press.

"Not the President, nor Congress, nor judges shall shackle or abridge the freedom of the press in the United States while the first amendment to the Constitution is intact, and there are men of wisdom and of courage ready to defeat and maintain it."

Following Senator Stanley's attack, Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, called on Mr. Daugherty to dismiss Assistant Attorney General Rush Holland, who had urged that the nominations of two men urged by Republican leaders in Hawaii for appointments as judges "will materially aid the Republican candidate for delegate" from Hawaii to the House of Representatives.

WILL ASK NEW TRIAL OF GETTIGAN

Jury Disagrees After 24 Hours' Wrangle and Is Discharged

J. Thomas Gettigan, Revere grocer, charged with the murder of his aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Cook, so that he might fall heir to her estate was led back to the Tombs, silent but with hanging head, yesterday afternoon, to await another trial. The jurors, after nearly twenty-four consecutive hours of deliberation, announced they were unable to pronounce a verdict. They were discharged by Judge Dubuque. The government immediately moved for a new trial.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning, after nineteen hours of wrangling, Foreman Lawrence S. Eearce reported a disagreement. Judge Hiram A. Dubuque ordered further deliberation, setting the time limit at 3 o'clock. During the morning he was informed of the illness of Juryman Bernard A. Brogan of Winthrop. The jurors were allowed to file into the courtroom two hours ahead of the time limit and after the disagreement announcement, were discharged by the judge.

Throughout the tiresome wait Gettigan sat in the steel-wire pen, apparently unmoved.

He leaned forward to catch the words of the foreman when the Judge requested the jury's decision, and paled slightly at the announcement, but to his attorneys, who stood near, he made no comment at the close. He was led away, his hands in his vest pockets and his head bowed in thought.

Expert Says Tea and Coffee Cause Cancer

By Universal Service.

London, June 3.

INCREASED consumption of tea, coffee and even red wine is the cause of an alarming increase in cancer cases, according to Professor John Joly, famous lecturer at Trinity College, Dublin.

Professor Joly points out that cancer has long been prevalent in China, while in Australia, also a great tea-drinking country, the cancer death rate is as big as in England. Mr. Joly said:

"Tannin in tea causes undue stimulation in the process of cell division, which is exactly the trouble from which a victim of cancer dies."

HOWLING TOM WAKES 'EM UP

North Cambridge Folk Frantic in Hunt for Cat

North Cambridge raises its bedroom windows in the still of the night and donates its old shoes to the winds, hoping some day to finish Old Pete, a howling cat, that has caused the several months of sleepless nights.

It seems Old Pete has had an extensive and well-filled social program for the Spring months and doesn't care so much about the need for sleep of his neighbors.

Old Pete's dates lately have been keeping him around Upland road and the Porter square section. Although pursued by police officers, schoolboys, housewives and sleepy and profane husbands, he still carries on.

The assault on Old Pete has even been augumented with steel traps, revolver shots and brickbats, but, Peterean sight a policeman or a steel trap several blocks farther away than the proprietor of a speakeasy.

Residents call North Cambridge Police Station every time they catch a glimpse of Old Pete, but he beats the coppers to it.

WHITE BAND KILLS TWO NEGRO LADS

Rovers With False Faces Attack House and Murder Cousins

Teague, Texas, June 3.—Roving bands of white men, with false faces, are precipitating a reign of terror throughout the countryside. The latest murders those of Leroy Gipson, nineteen years old, and his cousin, Allie Gipson, twenty-five, both negroes, were effected by a band of white men, disguised in that manner, who swooped down on the house of the boys' grandfather.

The posse demanded and obtained Leroy Gipson. He fought one of the band and the killing followed. Allie being slain when he rushed from the house to his cousin's aid.

A running gunfight ensued, and the white men escaped by crawling on their stomachs to the underbrush. Occupants of the house opened a barrage with rifles.

Evidences of rioting have been absent since the Kirven tragedy, the negroes evidently accepting the burning of three of their countrymen as an act of justice.

When Sheriff Mayo arrived with officers at the home of Moses Gipson, scores of negroes surrounded the bodies of the slain youths, fearful of further violence.

Investigation by the sheriff showed Leroy Gipson had been kidnaped two days before the killing by a group of white men in an automobile.

Beaten over the head with the butts of revolvers, Gipson struggled savagely and wresting a rifle from one of his abductors, escaped to the woods.

Sheriff Mayo dispersed the crowds at various points near the double killing, telling them there was no fear of further outbreaks.

"PRESS FINGER AND STOP TOOTHACHE"

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3.—Pressure on a certain finger will relieve toothache, if it does not stop it entirely, said Dr. W. D. Fitzgerald of Hartford, Conn., before the annual convention of the Allied Medical Association of America here today. He divided the human body into zones, saying:

"Pressure or percussion on the outer thumb of the right hand, for instance affects all zones on the right side, from the large toe to the brain.

MYSTERY IN STUDENTS' BRIDAL PLA

Manchester Couple Fi Intentions in Bosto Boy's Parents Surprise

Manchester, N. H., June 3.—Roscoe D. Chipman, New Hampshire College Junior, gave his sweetheart, Miss Katharine P. Cox, of Myrtle street, this city, a weekend surprise when she learned he had filed marriage intentions today in Boston.

Chipman had planned to return here and tell her about it himself and then set the happy day, but the newspapers had broken the news several hours before his arrival. So Roscoe also got a surprise. Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Chipman, parents of the young people were astonished at the news.

The young couple spent this evening in the little embroidery shop where Miss Cox is assistant manager. Neither young Chipman nor Miss Cox would say whether they intended to elope. Both seemed decidedly peeved that the news had leaked out.

When and where they will be married is undecided, due to the upset in the original plans of the young college student. Mr. and Mrs. Manima Chipman and Papa Cox seem satisfied with any arrangement that the young folks may decide upon, but Mamma Cox is indignant and declares that the wedding must be a quiet home affair.

Miss Cox, who is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, class of 1920, plans to attend her class reunion next week at the college. Young Chipman says he will return to New Hampshire State College Monday morning.

The young couple have been keeping company two years. No talk of an immediate wedding had ever been hinted by them and Chipman will not explain why he went to Boston and filed intentions without first informing his fiance.

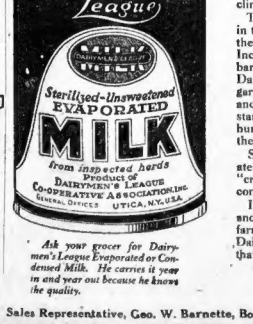
New York territory couldn't help being "milk land"

Creamy Milk



Ask your grocer for Dairymen's League Evaporated or Condensed Milk. He carries it year in and year out because he knows the quality.

It had to be the "milk land" of the Union. Iowa could raise corn. Maine had her potatoes, Georgia says "cotton," and Texas spells "cattle." But New York's soil, rainfall, seasons, and climate generally made it the "Dairy State."

There are approximately 70,000 picked farmers in the New York State territory who belong to the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., farmers who have clean, regularly inspected barns and clean, healthy cows. They are the Dairymen's League. Instead of 70,000 ideas regarding the production and distribution of milk and dairy products, they decided to have a single standard of purity and quality—the highest that human endeavor could make. When they put their collective name on anything, it is good.

So you can buy Dairymen's League Evaporated or Condensed Milk knowing that it is rich, "creamy milk," that it is pure and good and comes from the "dairy territory."

It is good today. It will be good tomorrow and next year, for the life-work of these 70,000 farmers is to see that the dairy products of the Dairymen's League are kept up to the standard that has been set.

SUTTERS, BESET BY BEAST AND STORM, KEEP UP HOPE

Howe Brook, Me., June 4.—As they sit in their cosy refuge, "Adam and Eve" look back on weeks of dire peril and suffering. Besides the terrible silence of the deep woods, full of terrors to the person accustomed to dwell in the busy haunts of men, they have been subjected to the buffetings of Nature in her most violent moods.

ESCAPE STORM PERILS.

Some of the worst storms ever known in this section have swept their fragile shelter. Last week rain pelted on them in sheets while lightning flashed and thunder bolts crashed into the holes of giant trees within a stone's throw.

When this storm had passed, cold descended upon the voluntary forest dwellers and snow began to cover their primitive home and its surroundings, and ice half an inch thick formed under the cedar stumps.

Eve, clad only in a meagre skirt of birch bark, ventured from her shelter only to pile dead logs on the fire which Adam had built outside their hut. Shivering with the cold, she had only evergreen boughs to protect her frail limbs.

Adam, despite the cold, must needs venture forth to find food. Stung by the blasts of a miniature blizzard, he had to stand half an hour knee deep in the icy waters of the mountain brook near his hut before he had speared enough trout to make breakfast for Eve and himself.

DARKNESS IN THE LOVE NEST.

Warmed in a degree by this food, he fared forth again with his only weapon, a hardwood club fashioned into the shape of an old battle mace. With this he brought down two partridges for the woodland dinner.

At that time he had been unsuccessful in all his efforts to snare a deer, although several times he stood within a few feet of one of the fleet denizens of the forest.

So cold was it when Mr. Sutter kept his rendezvous with the Advertiser reporter on the day of these incidents a week ago that the reporter was bundled in a heavy woolen shirt, a sweater and an overcoat. Nevertheless Mr. Sutter refused to don the coat while he defiled his experiences.

Early this week the dread spectre of illness entered the love nest of the Sutters. Eve, weakened by the exposure to the elements, contracted a bad cold, which affected her throat, and soon developed a high fever. Adam, abandoning the search for food, remained with his wife, keeping the fire going and applying simple herb remedies.

After a day or two these plain remedies, backed by Mrs. Sutter's wonderful power of resistance and her unflinching determination to survive, had their effect, and Eve was on the mend.

Thereafter Mr. Sutter returned to his work of developing his snares and practising spearing trout and knocking down partridges with his war club. His skull gradually increased and presently he had reached a place where he felt assured of his ability to keep himself and Eve supplied with enough fish and partridge to keep them alive.

ADAM SNARES A DEER.

The larger game—deer, bear and moose—however, still evaded his traps. Remembering his narrow escape from being himself caught last week by a bull moose, Adam was extremely cautious in exposing himself to attack by these ferocious animals.

To add to the worries of the pair, a thick haze descended upon the woods—the kind of haze that in the experience of woodsmen usually indicates a forest fire. Such a fire, should it attain serious proportions and sweep the part of the woods in which the experimenters in primitive life are living, would carry a end to the game caught by the menace far greater than that of native hunter, and perchance to wandering animals. Fortunately, the haze passed away and the danger was removed for the time being, at least.

But on Tuesday fortune smiled on the woodland dwellers, and fear of hunger vanished. Adam snared a deer. A half grown buck thrust his head through one of the snares of twisted roots and thrashed his life out in the attempt to escape. This marked the turning point in the six weeks test.

It not only provided a supply of food that was expected to last for some time, but it meant material for construction of a bow and arrow with which other large game might be brought down.

Although Mrs. Sutter had not entirely recovered from the attack of throat trouble, she was so overjoyed at the sight of her husband returning with the deer over his shoulder that she all but forgot her sufferings and greeted him with tears of heartfelt joy.

Forgetting the pain in her throat, forgetting even the terror with which she had listened in the night to the mother bear never attacks a persevering of a wood mouse, she immediately began making plans for more complete clothing for themarm.

'ADAM AND EVE' WIN AGAINST HARDSHIPS

...in the country where every manifestation of nature is harsh and is to be met only with brute methods.

CIVILIZATION THE VICTOR.

They have established themselves in the heart of the pine woods miles from civilization. Their naked bodies have been lashed by rains, pelted by snow and torn by briars. They have endured untold hardship, they have almost starved, but they have conquered. Today they are in much better shape than they were when they entered the woods and they have acquired a mental exaltation that will carry them far.

The Sutters have undoubtedly demonstrated without question the value of civilized brains. When they announced their intention of entering the woods to live for six weeks as primitive man and woman, the impression was general that it was a fool stunt. No one believed that it could be done, and no one could see what it proved anyway. The old saw, knowledge is power, applies not solely to the Sutters and their experiment. For they have proven the value of their knowledge.

Today it is misting gray rain over the face of the forest. A driving wind is helping the rain along, and it is mighty disagreeable in among the trees. But the Sutters are sitting snugly in their cabin of logs watching the rainbow lights of their wood fire, and listening to the drip of the rain from the eaves.

Their stomachs are full, they have primitive shoes and shirts and they are contented. In two weeks they have accomplished all this and it has been made possible entirely by their knowledge of what to do and how to do it.

The Sutters do not claim that any

How to Make Jellied Strawberries

A Delicious Novelty

Every Housewife Will Want to Try this Recipe

By Ann Proctor

Something new and delicious in the line of preserves that every housewife will want to make this season is jellied strawberries. Only three minutes boiling is required and the process is so simple and easy that success is assured at the first trial.

Select only small or medium-sized, fully ripened berries. Spread berries on their sides in single layer on flat plate and gently press each berry nearly flat with bottom of small bottle. (This leaves skins nearly intact, but ruptures fruit inside and makes it hollow, allowing boiling sugar to saturate tissues quickly.) Add juice of one lemon. Have 7½ heaped cups (1¾ lbs.) sugar measured in saucepan. Measure 4 level cups (2 lbs.) pressed berries and lemon juice into large kettle, placing layer of sugar over each cup of berries and balance of sugar on top. Allow to stand over night, so that part of sugar will be dissolved and mixture can be stirred and cooked without crushing fruit. Stir constantly and bring to a vigorous boil over the hottest fire. Boil hard for 3 minutes with continual stirring. Remove from fire and add ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) Certo, stirring it in well. Skim at once and pour quickly within five minutes from removal from fire.

Important: Best way to seal Jams and Jellies in open glasses. Cover while hot with thin coat hot paraffin. Next day add tablespoonful hot paraffin to seal cracks around edge formed by shrinkage on cooling.

The really astonishing results obtained by those who follow this recipe is due to the use of Certo, the pure concentrated jelly-making principle of fruit. It contains no gelatine or preservatives and is highly endorsed by leading domestic science authorities and housewives who have used it. By the "Certo Process" you can make jams and jellies from all kinds of fruits, either fresh or canned, with only one minute's cooking. These keep perfectly.

The above recipe and many others for making delicious jellies and jams by the "Certo Process" is found in the Certo Book of Recipes, a copy of which will be given to you by your grocer or druggist when you get Certo. Extra copies will be sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Inc., Dept. 109, Rochester, N. Y.

Important: Use Certo this year in making all your jams and jellies. It saves time, worry and boiling. The "Certo Process" never fails and saves money, because you make half as much more jam from the same amount of fruit.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please telephone Miss Harper, Ft. Hill 1014, to learn where to obtain it.

The use of glasses will effect a cure.

The glasses must, however, be correct in every detail; nothing must be left to guess-work or chance.

GIRL DEFENDS RICH MAN AGAINST HER JILTED SUITOR

MISS BURKE FIGHTS MANN ACT CHARGE

Fiance She Never Loved Exaggerated Ricker's Courtesies, She Says

Midnight wine frolics, Sunday gambling, flirtations and other conditions that she objects to, in the home of her fiance, answered the question, "What kind of a husband will a cave-man wooer make?" for pretty Eleanor Burke, but her decision to look elsewhere for a lover precipitated the little Roxbury miss into trouble anew, in which a millionaire hotel owner, and benefactor of the homeless child, was accused by her jealous and rejected suitor of violation of the Mann Act.

Humiliated by the breaking of the engagement which had been publicly called in the Roxbury parish where Frederick Jenner and his family are active in church circles, the spurned lover sought revenge by stirring up court litigation which traveled from the local police department to the office of the District Attorney, to Federal Judge Harris, and finally to the United States Department of Justice. He indignantly denies Miss Burke's story.

"Love! Love is the only thing to consider when one talks of marriage," declared Eleanor, sixteen-year-old orphan, who has been mothering her five younger brothers and sisters since their mother died early in the Spring.

"Never again will I consider any man unless my heart tells me that he is the one I really want. It is true that I was to marry Jenner to provide a home for my baby brother, James, who is not yet four years old.

NEVER LOVED HIM.

"I never loved the man, although I did like him, but the thought that I wouldn't have to worry as to where I should find a roof or where the next meal was to come from and who would be caring for Jamie proved too much for me. Again, it seemed to be my mother's wish, but I am sure she would be the last one in the world to want me to marry him if she knew how he acted toward me."

Tall, blonde, with frank blue eyes, Eleanor easily passes for nineteen or twenty instead of sixteen years, which she claims.

"All my trouble seems to have started when I met Fred Jenner. At that time I was trying to dispose of some of my wares. He called to see me several times, and I went out with him to walk. That was the start of our acquaintance.

"It wasn't long before he declared his love for me, but I felt I was too young to think of love. However, I consented to accept his attentions. Soon after this my mother was fatally stricken, and realizing that she wouldn't be with us long, one day she asked Fred if he would take care of little James, providing he married me.

"Fred promised, and seeing that it would ease her last days to believe I was soon to be settled in a home of my own, I consented to marry Fred. I did not love him.

"After the funeral I had no place to go, and Mrs. Jenner kindly consented to give me a home, as our wedding day was only a few weeks away. We were to be married the Sunday following Easter.

"What a revelation to me was the home life and disposition of this man I had promised to live with!

"Dice and cards and drink seemed to be the rule of his existence. He couldn't play without breaking up each game with a fight, until at last even his father refused to sit in a game with him. We were continually quarreling. He persisted in saying insulting things to me, and when I remonstrated with him, and finally with his mother, she replied: 'Well, Eleanor, you must accept you are going to marry a man.' Hardly a day passed that my life was not threatened by him, or he did not raise his hand to strike me.

CALLS HIM "MELODRAMATIC"

He was always melodramatic. I well remember how angry he would get at the coolness which I displayed on the various occasions when he made fake attempts at suicide, just to try and frighten me into some demonstration of affection.

"One night after a particularly bitter quarrel, I went into the kitchen and saw Fred wiping out his mouth with his handkerchief. His lips were stained and I thought it was blood where someone had hit him, which was not infrequent.

"Then I saw a bottle of iodine in his hand and asked him what he was doing. He said, 'Oh, I'm tired of all this fighting; you don't love me, so I want to die.'

"I laughed, for I knew what a coward he is, and said, 'Go ahead and drink the rest of the bottle; why don't you?'

"This made him more angry than ever, and he put on his hat and coat and went out.

"Finally things grew so bad that I begged my aunt to help me find some work where I should be freed from him and his disgusting family. She had previously worked for Mr. Ricker of the Poland Springs Hotel and advised me to go to him for work. She accompanied me to his office, and he hired me as a waitress for the Mansion House.

"Inquiring as to my experience in travelling, he learned that I had never been on a trip alone so he kindly consented to take me to Maine with him the next day, as he was returning to the hotel. My aunt and I agreed, and the next day I went to Portland with him. Of course, it is the custom of this concern to defray the traveling expenses of the girls they hire in Boston, but they send them down by day coach. However, as he was to accompany me, he bought me a Pullman ticket and also provided me with a magazine and a box of potato chips. He was very kind, like a father to me.

"It got cold as we travelled north and seeing me shiver he offered me the use of a fur coat he was carrying. This he helped me on with and wrapped it about me.

"It was these little courtesies of which I wrote my aunt, and which Mr. Jenner construed into huge evils. These were the basis for his report to the Federal officers that I was taken to Maine by Mr. E. P. Ricker for immoral purposes. Immediately upon our arrival at the hotel Mr. Ricker turned me over to the housekeeper and I saw no more of him until I was summoned to the office to be questioned by the United States officers sent there by the jealous, evil-minded fellow.

"LETTER MISCONSTRUED."

"Mr. Jenner lays great stress upon a letter I sent my sister in which I stated that I might go to Florida in the Winter. It came about this way: Believing that I was making good and that I was well thought of, I decided to push my luck, and asked if there wasn't something I could get to do through the Winter months as in the Summer. Mr. Ricker said yes. He thought I was worthy and agreed to take me to his Florida hotel in the Fall, where I could work until Poland Springs opened again the following year.

"I never smoked a cigarette in my life, and never allowed Fred or any other man to buy clothes for me. What I couldn't buy myself I went without. If his story of all the wonderful clothes he bought me within the last year is true, where are these things today?

"My wedding gown I made myself, and many a quarrel Fred and I had over it. He accused me of always sewing, and not paying enough attention to him. Nearly every stitch in my dress and the little dress I made for my sister, who was to be bridesmaid, is burned into my memory by some cutting remark, curse, or indignity from him.

A sweeping, indignant denial of Miss Burke's whole story was made last night by Frederick Jenner, his mother and father, to the Sunday Advertiser.

Mr. Jenner, who is 21, admitted he had started the investigation of Eleanor's trip to Maine and that his suspicions had been aroused because of the letter and particularly a phrase, "This shows how I fit with my new boss," which he claimed Miss Burke had underlined.

"We did everything possible to make a home for the orphaned child, but she is a heartless, ungrateful girl," chorused the Jenner family in unison.

The case has been continued for two weeks in the Roxbury courts.

Eleanor Burke, 16-year-old Roxbury orphan, and E. P. Ricker, millionaire hotel man of Maine.

STABBED IN WAR DISPUTE

Terry Davis, 28, of Kendall street, Roxbury, was taken to the City Hospital last night suffering from wounds that might indirectly be ascribed to the World War.

Davis, with others, while standing near 2012 Washington street, Roxbury, was approached by a stranger, who opened a discussion of the war. Someone told the stranger he knew nothing about the war, whereupon he displayed a discharge from the army, which he asked Davis to read. Davis refused and a fight followed.

The stranger drew a knife and is alleged to have stabbed Davis' head and face. Police have a description of the man, who disappeared as a crowd gathered.

FIGHTS ARREST IN RUM PLOT

Grossberg, Alleged Head of $4,000,000 Ring, Battles Extradition

Montreal, Quebec, June 3.—Harry A. Grossberg, alleged head of the great American liquor ring which is supposed to have obtained release of $4,000,000 worth of liquor from Ohio and Kentucky distilleries by means of forged permits, will fight extradition to Cleveland. He was arrested last Sunday night at the Ritz-Carlton and on Monday was committed to jail to await arrival of instructions from Washington after being arraigned on a charge of forging a liquor permit. His wife and child are staying at the Ritz. He was refused bail. His counsel, W. J. McKeown, K. C., also holds that the accusation is unfounded and the arrest unwarranted.

That there will be a fight is indicated by reports that Grossberg has no intention of waiving extradition and that an attorney from Cleveland will arrive tomorrow to co-operate with his Montreal counsel. At least six weeks will elapse before settlement of the case, if it is fought, and it is probable Grossberg will have to remain in Bordeaux prison all the time.

DELORME IN CONFESSION TELLS HOW HE MURDERED BROTHER

CLERGYMAN CHLOROFORMED AND SHOT HIM SIX TIMES

Detective Bares Story of Accused Slayer Who Cheerfully told of Ruse to Carry Out Crime; Had First Prepared Raoul to Meet His Maker.

Montreal, June 3.—Father Delorme has confessed the murder of his half-brother, Raoul, the Ottawa University student, slain January 6.

The confession was made on January 9, three days after the murder, to Detective Georges Lajoie, who spent two hours explaining it to the Grand Jury in a courtroom from which press and public and every one, except judge and jury and principals in the case were rigidly excluded.

The slaying took place between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when the unfortunate boy was seated at his desk writing a letter. A few minutes before that Raoul had expressed a wish to go out to get something and his brother, with murder in his heart, but a smile of solicitude, suavely volunteered to get it for him. The priest left the room, returning with a revolver and a cloth soaked in chloroform. He threw the cloth over Raoul's face and when the unfortunate boy struggled to throw it off, shot him again and again in a fury of insane, demoniacal passion.

ACCUSED MAN UNFROCKED.

The murder took place in the clergyman's home, where Raoul also resided when not at college. Delorme had carefully thought out his plans beforehand and there is every evidence that he had for a long time contemplated killing his brother to avoid being called on to give a reckoning of Raoul's estate for which he was sole trustee.

The detective was alone in the house with Father Delorme when the confession was made, but as the clergyman was not then under arrest it could not be used officially, as he had not received the customary warning that anything he might say might be used against him. There was no occasion at the time for such a warning, as the priest was not then even under suspicion.

The whole story was known, however, to the Crown prosecutor, to the Attorney-General, and, no doubt, was communicated to the clerical authorities and to the lawyers for the defence, with the result that the defence decided to make the plea of insanity.

This confession also influenced Father Delorme's superiors in the church in their decision, announced to the Grand Jury by Judge Monet, to deprive him of all his clerical rights and functions. In the eyes of the law, and in his relations to the public, Adelard Delorme is no longer a priest, and no longer entitled to the prefix Abbe—a fact communicated to the Grand Jury by the judge who took the unusual step at the opening of the King's Bench Court of commenting on this case.

SEE INSANE SYMPTOMS.

As a rule, no matter what the importance of the cases to be heard, the judge makes no comment at this stage.

Technically, Delorme is still a priest; actually, he is no longer vested with that sacred office, and this latter fact was made clear to the jury by the judge in impressing on those of them who were Catholics that they must not look on him in any other light than that of a priest—er accused of murder.

The astounding callousness of the clergyman in carrying out the crime goes a long way to substantiate the claim made by the defence that he was insane when he committed it and now is in no fit condition to plead.

It is pointed out, as an indication of insanity, that Delorme took precautions to insure that Raoul entered the spirit world with no stain upon his soul—and Delorme "with murder in his heart."

Raoul's last day on earth was spent under the guidance of his preceptor, who at that very time was revolving in his mind the circumstances under which the boy was to meet his death and was even carefully preparing him to confront his Maker.

About 4 p. m. of the day of the murder, when Raoul and the clergyman were seated in a little study adjoining the boy's bedroom, Raoul was smoking a pipe and leisurely inditing a letter. Fr. Delorme left the room and Raoul went on writing.

When Delorme returned he carried in his left hand a towel soaked in chloroform. In his right was a double-barreled revolver. Raoul's back was towards him, according to the confession. Fr. Delorme cautiously tiptoed across the carpeted floor. Throwing the saturated cloth over the boy's head, he pressed the revolver to his temple, but in a flayard revolver of the type used one barrel alone carries the bullets, the other being an air chamber. It was the barrel with the air chamber which pressed on Raoul's temple, and when the priest pulled the trigger twice the bullets entered the boy's cheek below the temple.

TOOK BODY TO CELLAR.

Young Raoul grappled with his brother, who then rapidly emptied the remaining barrels into his victim's head.

Raoul fell to the floor, but even in his death throes he struggled and Delorme again threw the chloroform towel over his face, pressing it into his throat and nostrils until slowly the struggles ceased, and his soul took flight, as his life's blood ebbed away and stained the towel and carpet.

The clergyman carried the body down two flights of stairs to the cellar, where he burned some traces of the crime, but was unable completely to staunch the flow of blood which, even as he lifted the inert form into the automobile in which he conveyed it to the lonely spot where it was found, oozed out and stained the cushions and the floor.

This, with still more gruesome details, was the tragic story the Grand Jury listened for an hour and a half, as it was related by Detective LaJoie.

That the detective himself believed Delorme to be insane was evident from some of the circumstances. He said the clergyman told how, after vividly describing the crime, remarked in a tone of quiet curiosity: "Now how do you think it happened?"

STILL UNDER OBSERVATION.

Feeling that the only thing to do was to humor him, LaJoie replied: "Oh, I suppose it was suicide. It looks that to me."

To this the priest made the rejoinder: "What, suicide? With six bullets in his head?"

At that time it was not known how many bullets were in the head of the murdered boy.

HE SAID "I KILLED MY BROTHER"

Rev. Adelard Delorme, confessed Montreal slayer, and his half-brother, Raoul Delorme, who was tricked in his brother's home and put to death with chloroform and by shooting. The clergyman, still under observation by alienists, is said to have been moved to his tragic deed by a desire for Raoul's money.

MANY JUNE WEDDINGS IN SOCIETY

Granddaughter of T. B. Aldrich a Bride at Trinity Church

That June is the chosen month of brides was evident yesterday and last night in the churches of Greater Boston and vicinity.

An out-door ceremony was celebrated when Miss Mabel Irene Lord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lord and Franklin J. Lane were united in marriage at the bride's home in Winchester.

In Arlington Miss Blanche Chamberlain became the bride of Norman Winslow Hall. The young couple departed in an automobile on a wedding journey.

Miss Alice A. Perkins of 469 Walnut street, Brookline, who yesterday became the bride of John Libby Curtis of Harbin, Manchuria, will make her home in Manchuria where her husband is president of the International Bank.

Miss Frances Hood of 326 Hammond street, and Gilbert King of Washington, D. C., were married in the Church of the Redeemer at Chestnut Hill.

Miss Leslie Carter of 75 Park street, West Roxbury and Theodore S. Clase of Westfield, N. J., were married in the First Parish Church last night.

Two talented musicians were married when Miss Enid Tippett, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. N. Tippett of 50 Peterboro street, became the bride of George E. Hibbard of Sioux City, Ia. The bride is a talented pianist and the bridegroom a violinist.

Three early June weddings in which Lexington and Arlington young people were principals were announced last night. Miss Evelyn Blanche Chamberlain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Chamberlain of Arlington, became the bride in Arlington First Baptist Church of Norman Winslow Hall, also of that town.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Esther I. Potter of Conway Center, N. H., was married in that town to Harold L. Kinman of East Arlington, a veteran of the 101st Engineers.

POISON CHARGE FAKE, WIFE SAYS

Asserts Husband 'Railroaded' Her to City Hospital; Wins Discharge

Declaring she never attempted suicide and her husband, Arthur Marena, No. 7 Allemarle street, Back Bay, had her "railroaded" to City Hospital as a supposed poison victim, Mrs. Rose Marena was discharged from that institution yesterday.

"My husband is making false statements about me," said Mrs. Marena, who was rushed to the hospital a week ago in an ambulance summoned by her spouse. "I did not take poison—I merely fainted. A bottle of medicine I had purchased for my mother fell out of my pocket and my husband seized that as an excuse to say I had taken poison." She wept as she said it.

"My husband has treated me cruelly. He has struck me so hard on the mouth that I bled for hours. He left me and went to live with his brothers. He does not tell the truth when he says I took the furniture, for he is using it now. I worked for him the four years of our married life and gave him all. This is what I get for my devotion."

ANCIENTS ARE 284 YEARS OLD

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston tomorrow will celebrate its 284th anniversary with a parade, banquet and drumhead election on Boston Common.

Services will be held in the Old South Church, but, unlike other years, reveille at sunrise will be omitted.

Mayor Curley will participate in the exercises. No Mayor has done so for a number of years.

MORE BOATS ON NANTASKET LINE

Until June 15 the Nantasket boats will leave Rowes Wharf every hour. Those running only as far as Pemberton will there connect with trains for all the stations on the way to Nantasket. Other boats run through to the popular South Shore resort, giving passengers a full hour's sail down the harbor.

On June 15 the full half-hour summer service will be put in operation.

FIND BODIES OF 3 LOST AT FALL RIVER

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you." —Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 341 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and rundown," writes Mrs. L. E. Wiese of 706 Louise St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and I find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you." — Mrs. ELIZABETH REYNOLDS, 408 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experiences of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their words are true.

Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MME. BLANC CALLS OSER'S ROMANCE 'LOVE A LA BUNKO'

"How Sad That the "Knight Gallant" Is 44 and Mathilde McCormick Sweet Sixteen!" Exclaims French Psychologist—Explains 1922 Flapper's Predilection for Man in Forties.

By MME. LORAGE E. BLANC

(The famous psychologists of the French School of Psychiatry.)

All the world loves a lover!

This, of course, means a young lover. The world laughs at the aged lover.

If the aged lover is loved by a beautiful and wealthy young woman, the old world wags its head solemnly and says: "Lucky dog! How come?"

If the aged lover is wealthy and takes unto himself a young and comely maiden, the old world turns up its lip with a sneer, and almost hisses, "Fool! No fool like an old fool!"

What is the precise nature of the fascination which aged men have for young and beautiful women?

A French jury recently failed to find the answer to the question, and cut further argument short by sending Monsieur Henri Landru to the guillotine.

When Landru was told that his prodivity for loving young women meant the chopping off of his head he turned to the judge and plaintively said, "I can't help young women from loving me!"

Recently in California a gray-haired man, seamy lined of face, and well on his way to fifty, was found murdered. His murder was a mystery, but not as much of a mystery as the homage and devotion paid to him by a score of beautiful film actresses many years under his age.

Again, the question, "What do beautiful young women see in men old enough to be their father?"

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

This question is not addressed to that species of female pirate known as the Gold Digger. The world is on to her game—she sees the Gold.

It would take all the psychologists and sedcs of the world to tell us why some young women form so-called passionate attachments for old men. Strictly speaking, it is not a passionate attachment, nor is it love.

Young women attach the glamor of romance to those characters we know as "a man with a past" or "a parlor philanderer." And, these characters are, as a rule, well advanced in years.

The 1922 Flapper is rarely seen in company of men of her own age. The portly, plethoric, sensual individual of the forties is the guide of the flapper through the mazes of our new social life.

Flapperdom has an explanation all of its own, for this peculiar state of affairs. The cry goes up, "I want a man. I want a real man—a fellow who knows!" It is a specious form of reasoning which has gained much headway in the United States since the war.

Why does a fat, chubby riding teacher of Zurich, with his forty-four years, appeal more to a sixteen-year-old American girl than some stalwart son of the Golden West, or a rugged athlete of Yale or a chevalier of the old South, or a son of New York's old aristocracy?

Does Mathilde McCormick reason that in a lonely Alpine retreat with her Swiss husband she will gather from life more happiness than did her parents surrounded with the gold and luxury of Standard Oil?

Does Mathilde McCormick believe that it is better to be an "old man's darling than a young man's slave?"

The love story of Max Oser and Mathilde McCormick in touching and beautiful—in fact, it would have the tinge of romance if there was not the age difference.

In the love story of the American heiress and the Zurich riding teacher, we are told through a combination of circumstances their lives seemed to have met at the cross roads and united.

How beautiful!

How tender such a love should be!

And yet, how sad that the "Knight gallant" is forty-four and the damsel sweet sixteen?

Who can answer the question as to whether or not it is wise for travelers on the road of love whose paths cross for each to continue alone on their way?

Youth never sees past the meeting point. It is the coming of the years that will either build or mar the romance of such meetings.

Time flies! A few years pass and the maid is in the full bloom of charming womanhood. She has matured. She is like a full blown rose. It is then that youth is apt to realize that there may have been something beyond the cross roads of life, where she first met age.

A young girl is full of aspirations and dreams.

After the age of forty man is experienced.

It is about the age of sixteen that the female of the species is just beginning to grope for the unknown, and is ready to believe that the ripe experience of an aged love is the portal to a larger and happier life.

Impetuous youth always pays the full penalty for its mistakes.

The aged lover! He is at all times an enigma! Can a man reach the age of forty-five or forty-six and experience the pangs of love?

Can a confirmed bachelor be regarded as a lover?

Bachelordom unmakes love. Selfishness of the bachelor crowds love out of his heart. He has been so much in love with himself that he has found no time to bestow love on woman. The confirmed bachelor is the supreme egotist of the age, and is immune to the reaction of the love bacillus.

In youthful beauty, girlish vivacity, and fiery sparklings of sweet maidenhood the bachelor does not see love—he sees nothing for himself except a reawakening of his youth. In this, however, Nature plays him a dirty trick for youth never returns.

Aged men believe they are in love, but, what is worse, another obsession takes hold of their brain, and that is "Youth is enamored of age!"

It is to laugh! How ridiculous?

Does the Bacillus Amo, that is Latin for the love germ, ever infect the aged man?

No! Not a thousand times No! The love germ might irritate the aged man, but it will never cause the disease, Love.

The love of aged men is reminiscent. It is a love of the bygone days, and for this reason it might for a very short time be as fiery as the flaming color of Autumn—so colorful as to be more glowing than the colors of youthful Spring, and yet withal it is not love. It is a pseudo-love. It is love a la bunko.

"Love is for the young!"

U. S. Joins Probe of Atrocities by the Turks

By Universal Service.

SECRETARY HUGHES announced today that the United States will join with the Allies in a proposed investigation of alleged Turkish atrocities against Christian minorities in Asia Minor.

DELAY WEDDING OF MATHILDE

Mother Drops Fight on Oser; Father to Probe Romance

New York, June 3.—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, today withdrew legal opposition to the wedding of her seventeen year old daughter Mathilde to Max Oser, elderly Swiss riding master.

But the opposition was withdrawn. It is believed, only after a compromise had been reached with her ex husband, Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the executive board of the International Harvester Company, under which he will not consent to the match, as the girl's guardian, until the romance has been thoroughly investigated.

Mrs. McCormick, charged the match was impossible because of disparity of ages, and asserted Oser is a fortune hunter.

The opposition was withdrawn in a court hearing before Probate Judge Henry Horner, lasting less than three minutes.

Attorney Cassells' statement to the court and to the belief that a compromise had been reached. He said:

"Mr. McCormick recognizes fully his responsibility as guardian of his daughter, and will discharge his duties as such."

"I think he will," said the judge, "and I expect him to take into consideration what has been brought out by counsel for both sides."

"The full duty of the guardian will be done," was the reply of Mr. Cassells.

Thus ended the proceedings which halted the baleful shadow of Cupid in New York as she was about to sail for Europe to join her elderly sweetheart.

Meantime, Oser, in Switzerland, has announced nothing can prevent the marriage and that rather than an aid," to the romance Mathilde's money is a "hinderance."

RABBI FAVORS PERSONAL LIBERTY

New York, June 3.—Letters from Stuyvesant Fish asking 150 prominent men to serve on the general committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment brought in by return mail replies from a third of that number. Not one refusal was among them. Miss Snyder testified that as she was walking home from school with two pupils the town auto stage passed them. They stepped aside and as they did so a noose which Miss Snyder said was thrown by Damon, settled around her neck.

She said she barely escaped being thrown, and her neck was cut.

Scars were visible in court. Members of the state patrol were called in and Damon was arraigned. He denied the assault. Damon has not been one of Miss Snyder's pupils.

IMPROVING THE COW IS GOVERNMENT JOB

Washington, June 3.—The government has tackled the job of improving the American cow. Figures show that cows of other countries, particularly Denmark, produce nearly twice as much milk and butter fat.

According to Dr. C. W. Larson, chief of the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture, the average production of cows in the United States is about 4,000 pounds of milk and 160 pounds of butter fat a year.

Of 20,000,000 graded and scrub dairy animals in this country there are less than a million purebreds. A wider dissemination of blooded bulls is proposed.

BOY, 13, SAYS HE SLEW PAL

Threw Body in the River After Row Over Stolen Goods

Almagn, Mich., June 3.—Thirteen-year-old Percy Kiter of St. Louis, Mich., was detained today following his alleged confession that he beat to death his fourteen-year-old schoolmate, Adolph Van Wallenghen and threw the latter's nude body into the River.

Kiter and Van Wallenghen quarreled over the disposition of stolen goods, according to Prosecutor Clark.

A third boy witnessed the quarrel. Van Wallenghen at first was opposed to have been the victim of an accidental drowning.

Kiter knocked his adversary down on high bank of the river near which they quarreled, followed him, cut his head against a limb, unclothed the body and rolled it into the river, Clark said.

One of the judges said four cases one evening and in the following.

PENNILESS, WON NEWPORT WIDOW; INHERITS HER FORTUNE

WILL NOW SEEK TITLE IN HIS ITALIAN HOMELAND

Smart Set Astonished When Dapper Visitor, Francesco, Laid Siege to the Heart of Mrs. Mason; Her Relatives Talk of Contesting the Will.

Newport, June 3.—Francesco Paolo Finocchiaro, heir to half a million American dollars, will leave Newport soon for Italy, where the King awaits his coming. With his Yankee wealth Finocchiaro may purchase, 'tis said, a costly title.

Under the will of his late wife, formerly Mrs. John J. Mason, the Italian has become chief legatee of her vast estate.

Whether or not relatives of the dead woman, one of the most popular and charming of Newport hostesses, will contest the will, remains a question. Certain it is, however, that they bitterly resented the attitude of Finocchiaro during the life of his wife, as they resent his presence today.

It was only a few years ago that the dapper Italian, suave and penniless, laid siege to the heart of Widow Mason, sole heir to the great estate of her husband. Hardly had he appeared upon the scene, when Mrs. Mason astonished her friends by hastily marrying him.

USED HONEYED WORDS.

"My darling" and "dear one" he called her in the presence of their acquaintances. "Yes, beloved," he would say, and "pray permit me, sweetheart."

Following their marriage, they went each Winter to Italy, where Finocchiaro is said to have endeavored to persuade his wife to make her home.

Under the laws of Italy, an Italian who marries a foreigner who dies in his native land inherits all her property.

Although friends of Mrs. Finocchiaro are very certain that she never suspected her bridegroom of duplicity, she declined to establish a residence in Italy.

Shortly afterward, the dapper husband of Newport's Lady Bountiful is said to have ascertained that she had made a will when she was Mrs. Mason, in which she generously remembered many of her friends and all her servants.

Then Finocchiaro, according to rumor, induced her to make a second will. Under its terms she has bequeathed $5,000 to Nellie Henry, a maid who had been with her for years. Friends of Miss Henry declare that the previous will contained a much larger bequest. All the rest reverts, eventually, to her husband.

The will reads as follows:

"To maid, Nellie Henry of New York, $5,000.

"To R. I. Hospital Trust Company, $25,000 in trust, income to be paid to brother, Harold G. Angel of Milton Mills, N. H., for life, on his death, principal to be paid to husband, Francesco Palo Finocchiaro.

"To R. I. Hospital Trust Company, $25,000 in trust, income to be paid to George A. Smith of Milton Mills, N. H.; on his death income to be paid to his wife, Laura Smith, for life; on her death, principal to be paid to husband, Francesco Paolo Finocchiaro.

"All rest and residue to husband, Francesco Paolo Finocchiaro; in case husband shall not be living at the time of the death of Harold G. Angel and George A. Smith and Laura Smith, then principal of trust funds shall be paid to husband's living heirs and next of kin, share and share alike.

CODICIL.

"In case of any common disaster or accident overtaking husband, Francesco Paolo Finocchiaro, and self, resulting in death together or at about the same time, all rest and residue, after bequests in will are carried out, shall go to husband's next of kin as the same are designated and fixed by the statutes of the State of New York, share and share alike."

SOLD ALL HER EFFECTS.

Following the death of Mrs. Finocchiaro, her horses, carriages and other personal effects are said to have been turned into cash by Finocchiaro, even before her will was probated.

After an illness of many months, Newport's gracious matron died at her apartments in the Buckingham Hotel, New York. Literally "dying by inches," she wasted away until finally the end came as she was planning to open Wabun, her estate on Catherine street, Newport.

Not realizing that the end was near, she wrote a friend that she was looking forward to returning to Newport. Sooner than she expected she returned—but, alas! 'twas in a coffin.

Mrs. Finocchiaro was Miss Florence Angell, and came from a prominent New York, Providence and Pomfret, Ct., family. Her first husband, Dr. John J. Mason, was a well-known physician, who divided his Summers between Newport and Bar Harbor, though his wife frequently expressed her preference for the lovely place on Catherine street. He is buried here in the Island cemetery, where his wife's body has also been laid away.

At her funeral, Finocchiaro, it is related, gesticulated wildly and rent the air with his arms, as he called upon heaven to witness that his darling wife was leaving him, never to return.

While many of Mrs. Finocchiaro's friends turned their backs pointedly upon him, others tolerantly remarked that such scenes were frequent with people of Latin temperment.

The personality of the enriched widower is interesting. He is an extraordinary looking man, with a foreign cast of features and a small "Charlie Chaplin" moustache, to match his little goatee. In build he is short and thick-set. He is always carefully dressed, with a precision that Prince Troubletskoy could scarce attain.

CLASH OVER FRENCH RULE OVER SYRIA

Gen. Gouraud's Army Ready for Uprising of the Natives

Cairo, June 3.—According to news from Galilee via Jerusalem, the French have reinforced their troops in Transjordania and French troops are standing to arms all along the Semakh-Dersa and Dersa-Damascus line.

The bridges and stations are strongly guarded, and there are armed parties on the trains.

In the Druse mountains to the north of Dersa the French have warned the Semaites that the French authorities are determined to maintain public security in French Transjordania, and the chiefs and notables of the tribes will be held responsible for the slightest disturbance which will be punished severely.

There is complete quiet, therefore, in this region, but Dersa is strongly fortified against a possible Bedouin attack.

AGITATION IN SYRIA.

Previously the respective customs administrations in Transjordania and Syria shared the dues on goods passing both ways, but as the French refused to refund to Transjordania the latter's share of customs revenues the Transjordanian Government is imposing taxes on all goods entering Transjordania from Syria.

General Gouraud, in an interview with a journalist at Beyrout, is recently reported to have said that an agitation was going on in Syria similar to that in Egypt, and it was, therefore, necessary for the British and French to co-operate to quell the common danger. The Egyptian vernacular papers take this statement as the text for violent anti-French editorials.

ARABS RESENT IT.

Declarations made by Farid Bey, the Angora Minister in Paris, to Zionist representatives, in which he is said to have stated that the Turks were satisfied with the Zionists' special position in Palestine, and also that the Turks recognized the French mandate in Syria, have caused resentment among the Arabs of Palestine.

This resentment is even keener among the Syrians, who are circulating anti-French propaganda in Palestine, Mesopotamia, and Transjordania.

The Syrian Confederation at Cairo has telegraphed a long appeal to the Council of the League of Nations against the French mandate over Syria, holding the Council responsible for subsequent troubles and bloodshed if the mandate be approved.

News from Syria is scanty, but the severity of the censorship is apparent here.

Recently a traveler from Syria brought a copy of a Damascus paper of four pages, of which two pages were almost totally blank, except for an account of French court-martial proceedings, with the sentences on two youths who were convicted of "having attempted to incite other powers to attack France."

THREAT TO JAIL BANKER SCHIFF

Says Untermyer Will Keep Him Company if He Goes

New York, June 3.—Sparks flew today at the Lockwood Committee investigation of the latest steel merger, with Samuel Untermyer swinging on the anvil and Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, flaring in anger at his interrogators.

Untermyer warned the banker he might go to jail for refusing to answer questions. Schiff intimated that if he did, Untermyer would keep him company behind the bars.

The discussion centred around the part Kuhn, Loeb & Company is to take in merging the Republic, Midvale and Inland Companies. Schiff said his firm was to head a syndicate to underwrite $25,000,000 in preferred stock at $80 and $14,000,000 in common at $43, and raise another $20,000,000 in cash to purchase additional Midvale paper.

Untermyer contended that the bankers intended to "create a market" for the stock of the new corporation with this $20,000,000 cash, and that they were likely to manipulate prices to favorable levels by buying and selling securities. Schiff was asked:

"So that while with one hand the syndicate is selling stock to the public, with the other hand it is buying stock from the public."

Schiff said this was not true because the transactions were not simultaneous and when the lawyer inquired how he knew, he shouted:

"We do not wash stock, and I resent that implication."

"All these resentments, you know, don't count," Untermyer said.

"Put the question in the way so that they are facts, and don't twist things," suggested the banker.

"Mr. Chairman, you had better warn this witness that he is not in his banking office," said the lawyer.

"And neither are you in your office," came the retort.

"Mr. Chairman," continued the banker, "Mr. Untermyer is trying to put words in my mouth that we are manipulating stock, and I will not do it. I refuse to answer an other question."

Then came the jail threat.

POLICE CLEAN UP BROCKTON AFTER ADVERTISER EXPOSE

Make Wholesale Raids on Hootch and Drug Places—Reveal Horrible Concoctions Sold as Whiskey

Stirred by the Sunday Advertiser's exposure of wholesale liquor selling and the operation of huge moonshine stills, the police of this city are making life miserable for the hootch gang.

Not in six months has the city been so free of moonshine as it is today, and the police assert that they will keep on the job and harass the booze makers and hootch sellers persistently until the city's underworld is again under control.

That they have been partly successful in their campaign is virtually certain, for the week just ending has noted the passing of four vicious and notorious hootch shops. Located in the heart of the city the owners of these shops did a thriving business, but the spotlight thrown on Brockton's illicit booze business proved their undoing.

Appreciating that their days of usefulness in the hootch business had passed, the owners of the joints went out of business and have obtained employment in the shoe factories.

In the "Village" conditions are 1,000 per cent. better and, while hootch is being sold in that section, of the law is now courage, and they it is not being flaunted in the eyes of the police or sold to strangers.

It was the Sunday Advertiser that lifted the shielding curtain of Brockton's underworld and displayed to the police and citizens the truthful picture of the hooch gang. The revelations astounded the citizens of this city.

They demanded an immediate cleanup, and informed the police that they would be supported in their efforts to rid the city of men and women who were selling poisonous liquors and debauching young girls.

The willingness of citizens to support the police gave the guardians of the law a new courage, and they immediately laid plans to trap the big moonshiners.

Acting on a tip furnished by one of the volunteer informers, Lieutenant Guerin, Inspector Gross and Policeman Morey and Clark raided a sole leather remnant shop at No. 249 Montello street.

In the basement the police discovered 200 gallons of moonshine, forty barrels of mash and a hundred-gallon still.

"AWFUL" STUFF.

Louis Epstein and Daniel Dinin, members of the sole leather firm, were arrested on a charge of exposing and keeping liquor for sale, but their cases have not been disposed of. They pleaded not guilty.

Clergymen, business men and scores of prominent women became satisfied that booze was being made in large quantities. They demanded a cleanup that would prove real, and urged the police to raid the joints in the village.

The citizens learned that the moonshine found in the plant of Epstein & Dinin was vile stuff. Police use the word "awful" when describing the quality of this stuff, but admitted that it was much superior to that turned out in the "Village" joints.

One raid in the "village" netted five men half crazed from drinking "white mule." Each was fined on a disorderly charge.

The next night the police went to the house owned by Karl Price, No. 76 Vine street, and garnered eighty gallons of ale and a small quantity of alleged whiskey. At the home of George K. Rachunas, No. 42 Hancock street the same raiding party found twelve gallons of ale.

On another night the police visited four homes and confiscated more than eighty gallons of whiskey and ale.

A Brockton newspaper that remained silent in regard to the city's hootch business until it was exposed by the Sunday Advertiser has this to say in regard to conditions in the city jail over the last week end:

"Twenty arrests for drunkenness were made by the police department Saturday and Sunday, most of the offenders being rounded up Saturday night. Arrests were made in nearly every section of the city, the house officers being called frequently to quell disturbances by intoxicated persons, but most of the arrests were made in the 'Village' at Montello."

OPIUM IN LAUNDRY.

To make certain that they would miss nothing of a contraband nature the police raided the laundry of Wong Fook and seized a quantity of opium. Six Chinese were arrested.

A tour of the city yesterday disclosed that it is not easy for a stranger to purchase hootch. It is being sold in several places, but one has to know the ropes perfectly before he is able to gain admission to any of the moonshine joints now operating.

Threats from the police that men and women found guilty of selling poisonous concoctions would be dealt with severely has frightened the poison makers and all of them promise their customers that a better brand of moonshine will be sold in the future.

It was the quality of the Brockton moonshine that aroused the ire of many citizens. They had purchased the vile stuff, and after drinking it underwent painful experiences. One man, according to a local physician, drank a small quantity of the stuff and was totally blind for three days.

For a while it was feared that his vision could not be restored.

A police official, commenting on the situation, said: "No decent man can have any sympathy for the hootch sellers. They sell vile stuff, and that several men have not been killed by it is considered a miracle. For the most part the moonshine is made from filthy products.

PUSH CAUSE OF DISABLED VETS

Take Them From Pauper Class, Bostonians Will Ask Harding

A petition containing the signatures of nearly 15,000 men and women of Greater Boston is soon to be sent to President Harding in an endeavor to have the disabled veterans of the World War transferred from the various State institutions to the new hospital at Northampton. The campaign is being conducted under the auspices of the Massachusetts Association of Disabled Veterans of the World War, of which William H. Burns is president, and supported by Senators Lodge and Walsh and Congressmen from Massachusetts.

Mr. Burns claims approximately between 3,000 and 5,000 disabled veterans are now confined in State hospitals and they receive the same treatment accorded the ordinary inmates classed as paupers. Mr. Burns declares the food and close confinement are anything but proper treatment for the men disabled in their country's service.

A letter has been sent President Harding by Mr. Burns urging him to direct Colonel Forbes, head of the Veterans' Bureau in Washington, to appoint a body at once to investigate conditions.

SEE BREAK IN COAL STRIKE

By Universal Service.

Washington, June 3.—Developments in the coal strike are moving rapidly toward Federal intervention.

Two groups of coal interests will confer with government officials here Monday.

Representatives of the mine operators of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio will meet Secretary of Labor Davis to discuss the industrial angle of the strike. They come on their own initiative, the conference marking the first direct overture on the part of the operators to the government. This move is interpreted by many as a break in the ranks of the operators.

Why not make your lunch hour more pleasant?

THAT intensity of purpose and sincere desire to achieve something worth while in life—which have set America in the forefront of nations—make many of us feel that there is nothing so precious as time—getting here and there in a hurry, whether it is eating or automobiling or what not.

Much like riding on a train when the speed often causes us to overlook small but important things in the landscape, so is courtesy sometimes unintentionally overlooked in business.

If you have thought of the Waldorf more as a place to secure quickly the purest and best quality food under cleanly conditions, we hope you will enjoy the efforts of all of us to make your stay more pleasant by the courtesy of good-natured, willing service.

"EYESORE" BUILDINGS TO BE RAZED

Many Structures Condemned by Health Dept. as Public Menace

The opening gun in the campaign to rid the city of its many "eyesores" resulting from the numerous dilapidated and unsanitary structures, was yesterday fired by Mayor Curley, following a lengthy conference with Health Commissioner Francis X. Mahoney.

The Mayor's decision comes only after a thorough investigation of the entire city's buildings by a score of health inspectors in charge of Dr. Mahoney and Deputy Health Commissioner Jordan and, with the cooperation of Building Commissioner Mahogey and his large staff of building inspectors.

Hundreds of pictures of these eyesores were taken by the city's forces and turned over to Mayor Curley, each accompanied with a health and building inspector's report, as well as a report covering the immediate vicinity in which these buildings are located and in nearly every case the words "fire menace and health nuisance" is attached to the report.

"The demolition of these structures," said Health Commissioner Mahoney, "will be the beginning of the campaign to rid the city of these eye-sores and insanitary structures, and afford more breathing spaces in the sections of the city where this type is usually found. It is expected that the Health Department will have the co-operation of the owners of such structures to the extent that the city of Boston will be put to little or no expense in removing these menaces."

FILTHY CONDITIONS.

The first list to reach the Mayor, signed by the Health Commissioner, is as follows:

16 Fellows Court, Roxbury. This is a dilapidated old building, three stories in height, the two upper stories being of wood and the basement story of brick. The house is vacant and open to the public. The premises are in a very filthy condition. It is a distinct fire menace to the other buildings in the vicinity. I recommend the demolition of this building.

Rear No. 904 Albany street, Roxbury—The old stable in the rear of these premises is a two-story structure, built entirely of wood and is in a very dilapidated condition. The stable is vacant at the present time and is a distinct fire menace and a nuisance. I recommend the demolition of this building.

Adjoining No. 17 Reed's Court, Roxbury—The old stable on these premises backs up to the old stable at No. 904 Albany street. This is in a very dilapidated condition. The stable is vacant at the present time and is a distinct fire menace and a nuisance. I recommend the demolition of this building.

No. 17 Hampden street, Roxbury—This is an old double house, two and one half stories in height, which has been vacant for a long time and is in a very dilapidated condition. It is adjacent to a junk shop and is a distinct fire menace. I recommend demolition of this building.

No. 37 Hampden street, Roxbury—This is a three-story structure dilapidated condition and is a distinct fire menace. This, with the adjoining building at No. 804 Albany street, should be demolished.

Rear No. 83 Dunlap street, Roxbury—This is an old two-story wood en building, occupied as a junk shop. Widen has recently been burned, and it is in a dilapidated and filthy condition. I recommend that it be demolished.

Nos. 8284 Hampden street, Roxbury—This is an old double house, two and one half stories in height, which has been vacant for a long time and is in a very dilapidated condition. It is adjacent to a junk shop and is a distinct fire menace. I recommend demolition of this building.

No. 37 Hampden street, Roxbury—This is a three-story structure with a brick front. The rest of the building is of wood and in a very dilapidated condition, and a distinct fire menace to adjoining buildings I recommend that it be demolished.

Nos. 4 and 6 Reed's Court, Roxbury—This is a two and one-half story wooden building with an old at the rear and is partially open to the public. It is a nuisance and a distinct fire menace and I recommend that it be demolished.

Rear of No. 903 Albany street, wooden structure, very much dilapidated, and is used at the present time for storage purposes. The building itself and the yards surrounding the same are in a filthy condition. It is within a short distance of a large dwelling house and is a distinct fire menace. I recommend the demolition of this building.

No. 3 Fellows Place, Roxbury.—This is a two-story wooden building in a very dilapidated condition and adjoins a number of other buildings in about the same condition. It is a distinct fire menace and I recommend its demolition.

No. 7 9 11 Fellows Place, Roxbury—On these premises there is one three-story building, one two-story building and a one and one-half story stable building.

A MESSAGE TO YOU

OUR June Expansion Sale starts tomorrow morning and will continue for the entire week. Because of the extraordinary growth of our business we have been obliged to take over the two adjoining buildings in the rear of our present store. The carpenters and decorators are at work on them now. In order to clear the way for workmen we must dispose of a large quantity of our stocks. The builders need all the available space for the alterations. This sale presents a furniture-buying opportunity to the public which shrewd shoppers should not miss. This is a genuine "honest to goodness" expansion sale—we need the room and therefore must move the goods. Look around and see if you can duplicate the values illustrated in this advertisement—we invite comparison. After you have shopped around, eventually you will come back to Summerfield's. Our salesmen are paid to help you make selections—not to "sell you" against your own best judgment.

WAKEFIELD MAN, WANTED, IS ARRESTED IN WARD CASE

PHILADELPHIA SUSPECT MAY BE MYSTERIOUS "JACK"

NEW MAN IN WARD CASE

John Cieurzot

The arrest of John Cieurzot, ex-bluejacket and private detective of Wakefield, who was found wounded in Philadelphia under circumstances that caused the authorities to suspect that he might be "Jack," alleged companion of Charles Ross and Clarence Peters of Haverhill on the night Peters was slain by Walter S. Ward, son of the millionaire baker, at New Rochelle, N. Y., added another New England phase to the Westchester county mystery yesterday.

The police believe Cieurzot is the second man shot by Ward on the night of the tragedy. They had been hunting for the second victim for a week. Cieurzot is said to be suffering from a bullet wound in the chest which had not been properly treated.

Investigation in Wakefield showed that Cieurzot lived with his widowed mother, Mrs. Florence Cieurzot at No. 63 Nahant street, before he went to New York. His twin brother Frank said:

"We have not heard of any mishap to my brother John. He enlisted in the navy at the outbreak of the war and served until after the armistice. Then he became a private detective and went to New York. He is twenty-seven and unmarried. He has been away from home almost he left the navy."

DROVE A RED STUTZ

Chief of Police Polard:

"I knew John Cieurzot who served in the navy. I have not heard from him in New York or Philadelphia authorities."

Mr. and Mrs Ethridge Peters of No. 19 Grove street, Haverhill, last night denied that they had been summoned to appear before the Westchester Grand Jury at White Plains, but said they were willing to go if notified.

The arrest of Cieurzot of Wakefield in Philadelphia brought to light that a man known as "Jack" and answering the Wakefield suspect's description had stopped at the Mills Hotel in New York, at seventh avenue and 36th street. He is said to have driven a red Stutz, a car similar to that described by Ward in his confession. His first appearance at Mills Hotel was six nights after the murder.

Employes of the hotel said Cieurzot may have registered under an assumed name. Up to six weeks ago he called frequently to see a man whose identity has not been established

"LOOK UP TWO GIRLS."

The members of the Ward family summoned to testify before the Grand Jury are Walter S Ward confessed slayer of Peters; his millionaire father, George S. Ward, president of the Ward Baking Company; Ralph P. Ward, brother of the accused and also an official in the Ward Company; servants, Mrs. Waldo Schuban and Mrs. Alfred J. Hook, neighbors who live across the street; State police and residents of Kensico Reservoir, where Peters' body was found on May 6.

Val O'Farrell's detective agency made public a letter from Jamaica which advised O'Farrell to shift his search to Philadelphia and to look up a man named "H—— and two girls."

The Philadelphia arrest, District Attorney Weeks said, held an important phase in his estimation. He said he would investigate every angle developed by this incident.

The prisoner's finger prints were sent to White Plains. They are to be examined by Raymond Hill, Westchester County finger print expert. Cieurzot said he had received the wounds in a strike fight. But he is not known among Philadelphia labor leaders, Weeks said.

One of Sheriff Werner's assistants went to New Rochelle with subpoenas to be served on Mrs. Walter S. Ward and the two Ward household servants. It was reported that Mrs. Ward, as well as Walter S. Ward's father, were to be questioned by officials tonight. Service of the subpoenas was reported in the afternoon.

Much speculation was rife in circles close to the Ward case as to what attitude the chief Ward and the wife of Walter S. Ward will take at the grand jury hearing. Included in this speculation, a point was raised as to what course the District Attorney might pursue if the Ward family members refused to answer certain questions.

Found Wounded; Police Think He May Have Been Peters' Companion.

Marilyn Miller Just Adores Jack, Her 'Perfect Man,' and--She Will Marry Him

Charming poses of Marilyn Miller, "Sally" star, who is firm in her determination to marry Jack Pickford.

He Sends Her Several Love Telegrams Every Day; Has Emerald Engagement Ring.

The second of a series of love chats with Marilyn Miller appears in the Advertiser today. Marilyn, beloved of thousands, has taken her pick of men—and all the world envies Jack Pickford.

Why was he the chosen one? There were richer men, and men of greater fame, among Marilyn's adorers. Why did "Sally's" sweet star turn her pretty back upon them and tell young Pickford "Yes"? Because he gave her a bag of chocolate creams, instead of a diamond lavaliere!

By ELEANOR EARLY.

"Sally's" star was smearing her back with liquid powder, while Viola, her dusky maid, drew on her golden stockings. Sister Claire clasped the precious pearls about her neck, and Mother Miller fluttered about with the rouge pot.

It was between "Sally" acts, and no time to lose. While the trio mingled, Marilyn prattled on—Jack this, and Jack that. She loves him, she's going to marry him. They're going to be terrible happy, and he's the most wonderful boy that ever lived—

"My dear," cried Marilyn, "I ADORE him!"—and her voice rang true. No play acting in the dressing room 'Twas a real woman declaiming her love for the man of her choice, and declaiming it in the face of protests that would have prompted most girls to call it quits

IT JUST ISN'T TRUE.

"The things they say about him aren't true. That wretched navy business is all lies. He's wonderful—" and on she gushed till a timid little messenger poked his nose through the curtain.

"Nother telegram for Miss Miller," he said

Marilyn pounced on him. Like a little flapper, with her first love letter, she pressed it to her lips.

"Jack send me three and four every day," she announced, as she read it through, "and all just chuck full of love. A loving man is God's greatest blessing, and woman's greatest consolation.. He tells me to be sure to look at the moon tonight—that it's a very romantic one—and makes him miss his girl. Now who wouldn't love a man who says things like that?

"That's why I fell in love with him—because he says such tender, lovely, silly things. And because he does such perfectly wonderful things

"Rich men, you know, think of love in terms of diamonds, and pearls, and motor cars. They think they can buy their way to a woman's heart—if they strew the path with gold. And so the rich men wooed me—with their dirty dollars and their crass old gifts.

"But I don't care about that sort of men, and their sort of love. And I didn't want their jewels any more than I wanted their hearts.

BY ALL MEANS, CHOCOLATES.

"You know when a girl gets $3,500 a week, that's a share of "Sally's" big profits, she can buy her own trinkets. So, when Jack came along, with his boyish ways, and his dear, sweet thoughtfulness, I just naturally fell head over heels in love with him.

"Sometimes I think Mary must have whispered to him the way to a woman's heart. For he knows what every woman knows—that it's the LITTLE things that count.

"When a bloated billionaire sent around a diamond lavaliere from Tiffany's I sent it right straight back again. But if Jack brought in a paper bag of old-fashioned chocolates, I'd fall on his neck, and kiss him.

"The costly corsages that rich men send, float in my bathtub, while I proudly wear Jack's single sweet rose-bud. And champagne from an unknown admirer lay forgotten on the ice, while Jack and I cracked the peanuts he brought down to the Copley-Plaza.

"When a girl is in love, it's little things she craves—little attentions little thoughtfulness, little gifts little acts of love. If only men would remember that women would be so much happier. Jack is wiser than most men in love, and so he wooed and won me

ONLY TWO LOVES.

"Frank Carter, my wonderful first husband, was very much like Jack And they're the only two men I ever loved—the only men I know who didn't let fame and fortune run away with them Jack has kept the 'common touch' of which poets sing He's just a plain, every-day boy, with a heart full of love for the girl who loves him. A boy who proves his love in the good, old-fashioned way, with 'old-fashioned gifts and old-fashioned thoughtfulness

"True, he's rich, and true he's famous. But so, too, am I. So we're not marrying, as so many do in modern style, for either wealth or prestige. We're marrying for love—and we'll be happy forever and ever

"It isn't just the little things he does. It's the big things, too, for Jack's no piker in love. See, here is my engagement ring—my jewel case, Viola, and find my precious emerald."

NECKLACE OF JADE.

Viola found it and Marilyn displayed it—a white emerald, big as her finger nail, and worth a king's ransom.

"When he was in town last week he brought me this necklace of jade—did you ever see anything so exquisite? And that gold toilet set is a recent gift I've the most adorable pearl ear rings you ever saw that came from Jack. And I've a dozen wonderful vanity cases, dinky little things from Paris. Never was there a man with such a faculty for choosing the just right thing to you wonder I love him"

(To be continued in Monday's Advertiser.)

DOUBT GIRL'S ATTACK STORY

West Boxford, June 3.—The man hunt that has been conducted here by at least half a hundred farmers for the alleged assailant of seven teen year-old Jennie Doucette has been abandoned.

The farmers, after tramping over acres of forest land have at last decided that they have had "some thing put over" on them, and have gone back to farming. If there is an assailant running loose in the woods of West Boxford he may run the entire works for all the farmers care. But said farmers are winking a knowing eye and expressing their doubts.

Local and State police working on the case have given up the active hunt for the alleged assailant, who, the girl says, threw pepper in her eyes and hit her on the head with an electric bulb. They are devoting their time to efforts to make the girl admit that a grand hoax has been put over on the townsfolk. Jennie is firm in her original story and refuses to be shaken, but the police have grave doubts.

GIRL MISSING SEEKING WORK

In Anna Simon, the pretty seven teen year old girl who disappeared from her home in Dorchester six weeks ago, to go into the long list of Boston girls who drop out of sight and whose fate is never known?

Anna is the daughter of John Simon of 24 Lorne street, Dorchester. Her sisters say their stepmother Mrs. Rose Simon, and Anna could not get along. The two older girls say they quarreled with their step-mother, left home and went to live with relatives. Anna complained of home treatment after she lost her work at Lowney's candy factory.

On the morning of May 4, Anna told her step-mother that she was going out to look for work. She never returned. She is five feet, four inches in height, weighs 120 pounds, has fair skin, brown curly hair and wore a brown top coat, tan shoes, black stockings and a black and white silk hat. The girl took no money or extra clothing with her.

An aged grandmother in Lawrence Mrs. J. Simon, pleads that the girl come to Lawrence and make her home with her.

Rose Simon, a sister of Anna, says if anyone can locate her sister and notify her at her home, 4 Lorne street, she will give the girl a home removed from any real or fancied trouble.

G.O.P. CHIEFS TO RUSH SHIP BILL

By W. BRUCE McNAMEE,
Universal Service Correspondent.

Washington, June 3.—Republican leaders in the House today responded with a rush to the cracking of the party whip by President Harding for a ship subsidy at this session.

Emphatic statements from the White House that the President did not intend to assume responsibility for the failure to pass a subsidy brought House leaders up standing.

Speaker Gillett, Floor Leader Mondell, Chairman Campbell of the Rules Committee and other leaders hurried to the White House to give assurances of "earliest possible" action on the subsidy bill.

Chairman Greene and Representative Edmonds of the House Merchant Marine Committee also went to the White House. They informed the President the delay in whipping this legislation into shape was necessary because of extended hearings.

Speaker Gillett and Representative Mondell assured President Harding that everything would be done to facilitate legislation. They told the President the bill faces stiff opposition when it reaches the floor, because of the almost solid alignment of the Democrats against it, as well as several antipathy toward the consideration of new legislation at this time.

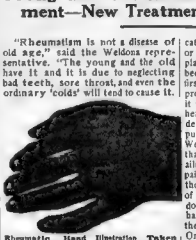
RHEUMATISM DUE TO GERMS— CLAIMS WELDONA MAN

Young and Old Suffer from Painful Ailment—New Treatment Very Effective

"Rheumatism is not a disease of old age," said the Weldona representative. "The young and the old have it and it is due to neglecting bad teeth, sore throat, and even the ordinary 'colds' will tend to cause it.



Rheumatic Hand Illustration Taken from Booklet, "Germs of Rheumatism."

"Chronic rheumatism often starts as a slight stiffness of the knees, noticable to any great extent at first, but perhaps a little stiffness in the morning, or going up or down stairs, getting on or off a street car. Again the first symptoms may be grating of the knee joints, or a catch when stepping off a sidewalk, or sharp pains darting from one place to another. The muscles may become sore and stiff, slightly at first, but becoming more and more pronounced so that in some cases it is difficult to get the arm to the head, or disturbance in the shoulder joint as the something was pulling down on the shoulder Weldona has proved to thousands that they need not suffer from this ailment—Weldona has removed the pain and stiffness of the joints of thousands who have taken 'barrels' of medicine without result—Weldona is not an experiment, for it has legions who claim it has freed them from this terrible 'plague' One does not have to take Weldona for months and months before they see improvement—some say from the very first dose the pain, stiffness and swelling of the joints is relieved. Send to Weldona Co., 132 Boylston St., Boston, for free book, 'Germs of Rheumatism.' Get Weldona now—today from your druggist."

ONE OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED FOLLOWING OUR REQUEST FOR LETTERS OF CRITICISM

Adlepate on the River

Raymond Syndicate;
Gentlemen:—

My maid showed me your advertisement in yesterday's paper in which somebody in charge asks us to criticise your store and I am hastening to do so for I think it is terrible. An account of my experiences there last week is most harrowing and my friends can scarcely believe me when I tell them.

I took my little son Montmorency in the sedan. The chauffeur had a very hard time to get anywhere near the store, there seemed to be such a crowd of common people there. I really should have turned back then for I am not used to associating with the rabble but my woman's curiosity got the better of me. To my surprise there was no lackey in uniform to open the door for us and I had to do it myself, can you imagine such a thing? It left me almost exhausted. When I did get in, no one paid any special attention to me at all, and little Montmorency wasn't petted a bit by the clerks. There wasn't a single mahogany show case or counter, just plain tables and shelves, and imagine it, many garments hung on a kind of iron rack. Almost unbelievable.

The prices were ridiculously low, but when I picked out a few little things my troubles started. I asked the clerk to charge them and he insulted me. Told me they had no charge accounts. Even when I told him who I was and that I owed six of the biggest stores in Boston money he wouldn't change his mind, so I really had to pay him right there, something that is never done in our set. And he wouldn't deliver the things, can you believe it? Said they had no expensive delivery system, but that he would carry them out to the auto for me. Such rudeness, I know James the chauffeur, would have resigned then and there if he hadn't had a stiff neck so he couldn't look around when we got out. I had to take the things up to a woman behind a cage and there were some ordinary people in line ahead of me and they never offered to get out of the way and the clerk didn't make them either. Then the things were actually bundled up while I waited and the clerk carried them out for me. I even had to open the door again for the clerk's arms were full of bundles, did you ever dream of anything like it? Our set is very very different.

I hope after getting this letter you will do things as the more exclusive stores do or our set will not patronize you. Personally I shall never go to your emporium again. You are too democratic for my exclusive set. Yours disgustedly,
(Mrs.) IMA HIGHBROW.

MOVIE KISS IS BORE TO MOVIE FOLK

Directors Have to Urge Stars to "Try and Look Pleased"

SOME KISSES ARE CENSOR-PROOF

Charles Ray, Wise Youth, Confines Osculation to Lady's Wrist

By CINDERELLA

It has been said that a kiss on the screen is worth three at a family reunion.

It had been said — that to some girls any fish out of a screen kiss, any more than a small boy gets a thrill out of seeing Jackie Coogan fill up on a plate of ice cream. He'd rather do it himself!

What do you think?

The kiss of the movies today is one of the things that has caused the censors to censor. They measure it in feet, at so many feet a second, and when an innocuous osculation is called a 200-foot kiss, it—well it doesn't sound quite nice.—If you say that Norma Talmadge and Harrison Ford had a 250-foot kiss in such and such a picture, the censors give one look, maybe two, drag out their shears and settle down to business.

Furthermore, the layman has a deep-rooted conviction that much of the movie work does not call for acting ability. Some stars, they say, just smacked their way to fame.

—BUT IS IT ACTING?

Listen to this:

"Mr. Ford," the director remarks to Harrison Ford as the Kliegslights sputter all about "Just step up and kiss Miss Talmadge and try to look pleased."

Mr. Ford just steps up, kisses Miss Talmadge.

"Look pleased!" shouts the director.

Mr. Ford looks pleased.

As Kipling might have said, "It's clever, but is it acting?"

"Now" says the fan. John Smith fails to see how that scene requires any actual ability, histrionically speaking.

And listen to this

Louise Huff goes to the arms of Richard Barthelmess after eluding him for four and a half reels and according to metaphored orders, just hold that embrace with Mr. Barthelmess for another hundred feet—and try to look happy, please!" Sister Jane, in the third row from the back remarks loudly that you don't have to be any Sarah Bernhard to do that. "Gee, she could do it herself."

The censors have catalogued screen kisses—as far as they have been able to pigeonhole romance.

CAN'T BE CUT

Charles Ray is their delight. In "The Barnstormers" he bestows what the censors call a KISS. He gently touches the wrist of his leading lady with his lips. It would pass in Tokio, where laws are Ray's are known as the "veneer proof kisses." You can't reasonably cut footage from them.

There is, again, the "kiss of oblivion." Anita Stewart and Walter McGrail indulge in it—correctly cut—and nothing could interrupt them but an earthquake or the director a short "cut!"

Charles Ray illustrates another brand the "kiss of impulse." He makes use of it in "The Twice of Spades." Its chief value, in the eyes of the censors, is that it is short. One quick grab, the kiss—and that's that.

The "kiss of understanding," shown by Norma Talmadge and Harrison Ford in a scene from "Smilin' Through," is gentle, but in the eyes of the shears-wielders, it must needs be trimmed. It is a serious affair and comes at the end of 8,000 feet of vicissitudes. In other words, it is usually the "fade-out."

HAVE WE CAVE-GIRLS?

Viola Dana favors the "rave-girl kiss." or "kiss in reverse English." She is usually seen as a flapper with a mind of her own and when she wants to "grab off" the stalwart hero 'who is he to say her nay, so to speak' It's ordinary carried off so lightly that the censors be caught napping. Their scissors lie

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it idle and Miss Dana winks the other eye.

John Barrymore, with his affectations and carefully bobbed hair, keeps them guessing. He takes a long time over his kisses. They might almost be considered in the light of serials. It is a lingering process, from the first slow look to the last breakaway, and keeps the kiss-measurers on pins and needles. Just what does he mean? Do you mean?

BAY STATE EXPERTS WINNING WAR ON INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Wonderful Results Achieved by Harvard Commission in Five Years.

What is infantile paralysis?

Thousands of fond parents all over the country, into whose homes this mysterious disease has come when least expected—bringing in its train a new agony and affliction—would like this question to be satisfactorily answered.

For it is a curious fact about infantile paralysis that no family, and no home—no matter how favorably situated—can be said to be immune from it. It apparently defies the ordinary laws of health and hygiene. The children who live in the hills or at the seashore are no more immune from it than are those who live in congested city slums. Nor are those who dwell in well kept residential districts immune from it.

COST IS ENORMOUS.

It is estimated that there are at least 100,000 persons in the United States who are crippled through infantile paralysis and it is also estimated that these 100,000 cripples represent an economic loss of $1,000,000,000—to say nothing of the anguish they cause. For there is no system of bookkeeping by means of which it would be possible to strike a balance with anguish. Nor is there any method of estimating the silent burden which every family must bear that has one of these victims of infantile paralysis.

Five years ago a special commission of medical experts—the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission—set out to solve the medical problems involved in this mysterious disease, and, if possible, to discover its origin. The commission has done a wonderful work in these five years, so wonderful, in fact, that there is great hope it will solve every problem connected with the disease before long. It has effected some remarkable cures.

Eminent physicians in Sweden, Germany, France and other countries in which the disease appeared in epidemic form had studied it and had arrived at certain definite conclusions in regard to it. Here in the United States, especially in New York, experts had been making very careful investigations of the disease, but on the whole—and largely because of the limited and restricted character of all these studies and investigations—the work had been more fruitful of speculation than of definite principles and laws that would serve as a sure guide in epidemic emergencies.

FROM MANY ANGLES.

So this effort by the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission was the first in which a selected group of specialists set out in big and comprehensive way to study from a number of different angles the various problems which poliomyelitis presents, then to correlate the data and facts secured over a broad area, under different geographical, climatic and social conditions, and determine, if possible, a means of prevention as well as the best methods of treatment. Poliomyelitis is the technical name of the disease.

One very important thing the commission has learned is that infantile paralysis is not always accompanied by paralysis. It has also learned, and taught the medical world, how to treat the disease, and it is working steadily toward a solution of the mystery that surrounds the plane museum of the disease.

The work of the commission has been so comprehensive, enlightening and effective that not only the medical world but the world at large owes it a debt of gratitude—a debt which it is very difficult to pay. In fact, when its accomplishments are even partially understood mere gratitude" seems like a meaningless and empty form of reward for the service to humanity which the commission has rendered.

To understand something of the nature of the work and to get an idea of the frightful character of this disease—and the state in which it leaves its victims—one should attend a clinic either in the Children's Hospital on Longwood avenue or elsewhere, for clinics are held in a number of places throughout the State. Clinics are held at the Children's Hospital Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday forenoons. At each of these clinics some thirty children are being treated at the present time.

EFFECTS OF DISEASE.

At these clinics you see the terrible effects of the disease and the methods of treatment. You perceive the first thing that will impress the visitor is not the victims themselves so much as the look and bearing of the mothers of the afflicted children, who bring the little ones into the room in their arms, or hover beside those who come in on crutches or with legs and arms encased in specially made frames. That is the added pity of it all—the suffering of the mothers. They bear a great burden.

But you also quickly discover another thing about these mothers for somewhere in their faces you sense something of the hope and courage they receive when they bring their crippled and deformed children to the clinic, for, of course, they are familiar with many of the wonderful things that have been accomplished through these clinics.

Various kinds of apparatus have been devised by the commission for the use of deformed legs, arms and bodies during the process and progress of this after treatment of the disease. In the handling and distribution of this apparatus by the commission, a curious but well known trait of human nature has not been so much discovered as it has been given new emphasis—that trait or inclination of human beings to value lightly those things which cost nothing. At first the commission furnished the necessary apparatus without cost, but so much of it was broken and destroyed that it was decided to charge for it—a cost charge. Since then there has been very little destruction of apparatus, and last year the entire repair bill was only $50.

PUBLIC AWAKENED

But perhaps after all one of the most important things the commission has been able to do is awaken the consciousness of the state and Nation to the seriousness of infantile paralysis. The World War and its excitements hid it for a time, but now it is seen that this disease might easily become as much of a scourge to humanity as any war. For when you have 100,000 disabled victims of the war which this disease has been silently waging in the country—to say nothing of the mortality—you have a problem that concerns every man, woman and child in the State or Nation fully as much as would an actual war with another nation.

"We have acquired very definite knowledge of this disease in the past five years," says Dr. Robert W. Lovett, head of the commission, "and the results have been worth all it has cost in time, energy and money; but the work must be kept up and I am sure the public will see the necessity for enlarging the scope of the commission's work. We want more trained nurses, for we must be in readiness for the emergency that is liable to come at any moment, to say nothing of the 1,15[illegible] cases we are now treating. We should have more and more clinics all through the State.

"Organizations like the Red Cross and the District Nursing Association have been of great help to us and such people of Mrs. John Hays Hammond, who has given us a great deal of free auto service to and from our clinics."

A finance committee was organized in 1918 consisting of Joseph Grafton Minot chairman Gordon Abbott, Benjamin H. Anthon, Jr., Charles T. Billings, Francis W. Bird John D. Bogart, Spencer Borden, John Bruce, William J. Curtis Rev. S. Conrad, William W. Crapo Louis A. Crossett, Charles P. Curtis, J. Sumner Draper, William Endicott, M. GATHER MEN FOR MILLS

New Hampshire Agents Picking Up Help for Opening

Manchester, N. H., June 3.—Mill agents all over the State were busy tonight lining up workers and perfecting arrangements for the reopening of the textile mills Monday after a shutdown of many weeks.

Mill owners declared they had enough workers signed up to assure a successful reopening.

Strike leaders laughed at the claim and said not more than 200 workers would turn out in Manchester and that the proportion would be the same all over the State.

Picketing will be tame when the mills open. Police have limited the strikers to two pickets at each gate and warned them against too aggressive measures. Most of the strikers will remain at home.

"This will be nothing more than a test of the strikers' morale and we shall win," said Vice-President James Starr of the United Textile Workers tonight.

All the union leaders are advising against violence and urging their followers to make the expected victory a moral rather than physical one. The mills that will reopen include the Coolidge mills here; the Pacific mills at Dover; the Nashua and Jackson plants at Nashua, and the Suncook and Newmarket mills.

10 MILL FAMILIES FACING EVICTION

Providence, R. I., June 3.—Notices were served today upon the families of ten textile mill strikers occupying "company houses," owned by B. B. & R. Knight, Inc., in the Pawtuxet Valley villages of Natick and Pontiac, that they must vacate corporation property by next Wednesday or be evicted.

Among those ordered out is the family of John R. Cushon, financial secretary of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America with whom Amalgamated leaders directing the strike in the district have made their home since they came into the valley following the walkout of the operatives nineteen weeks ago.

DID MY BEST TO CONVICT, SAYS BLOOD

Guided by Judge Brown on Admitting Evidence in Logue Case

Assistant District Attorney Charles W. Blood, accused of laxity in his conduct of the trial of Dr. Michael M. Stevens, of Woburn, acquitted on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death last Christmas of his office nurse, Grace Logue, last night declared he had fought the case to the best of his ability.

"We felt that the legal admissibility of the evidence of Anna Logue, Mrs. Helen McCormack, Miss Viola Palmgren and others, regarding alleged beatings received by the dead girl, was so very doubtful that it would not help the case.

"Judge Brown informed us that the defendant objected to the admission of such evidence. He said that if it were admitted and a conviction secured, the Supreme Court would undoubtedly overrule the finding of the jury.

"I did not point out the defendant's rights in the case, nor did I ignore the wording of the grand jury indictment. The phraseology contained in the indictment is merely the legal wording for a manslaughter charge.

"As for my refusing to see the witnesses or call them to the stand, no one ever told me they had any such evidence to offer.

"We could not contradict the evidence of Dr. Stevens on that day, as we had no witness to offer who could dispute him.

"I am sorry for Mrs. Burpee Logue and her poor daughter, Grace. I did the best I could and lost."

WOMEN IN PAY CONTEST

Board of Aldermen Will Probably Yield to Public Opinion

CITY WAS LOSING ITS GOOD TEACHERS

Increase of Pay Will Mean Boost in the Tax Rate

It is virtually certain that Melrose school teachers have won their fight for higher wages.

Tomorrow night the Board of Aldermen will take up the much-discussed school wage problem, and, bowing to public sentiment, will undoubtedly concede the demands of the teachers.

By doing so they will stop the raids that other cities are directing against the teaching force.

The controversy between the teaching force and the Board of Aldermen hinges on a cut of $15,000 in this year's budget. This cut meant that an advance in pay, which was granted to Melrose teachers last year, would be lost in the coming school year.

Last year's "raise" averaged $75 per teacher.

To lose that "raise" was more than the teachers would stand. They made a rumpus and, to crystallize public sentiment, in their use, they held a mass meeting in unorial Hall.

TIZENS WITH THEM.

The citizens backed the teachers and after the meeting informed the aldermen that the $15,000 cut in the school appropriation would have to be rescinded.

Yesterday it was apparent that the aldermen had experienced a change of heart toward the fair teachers and that they could save to keep "hands off" the school department when slashing city expenditures.

Mayor A. L. Goodwin, who was instrumental in putting through the small salary advance last year, stands by the teachers in their fight for better pay.

"I have no right to speak for the aldermen," said Mayor Goodwin, "but I think that they will grant the demands of the teachers at tomorrow night's meeting. The aldermen did not slash the school salaries in any spirit of indifference. They endeavored to cut expenses. It is apparent that the people are opposed to any cut in the salaries of school teachers and are willing to meet the added expenditure in increased taxes."

BOOST FOR RATE.

The present tax rate is $30.80 per thousand and to meet the slight advance in school salaries it will be necessary to boost the tax rate. Ex-Alderman Albert M. Tibbetts estimates that the increase will mean a boost of not more than $1.25 per thousand.

The boy's share of credit for the school teachers' victory goes to Miss Annie C. Washburn, Miss Lena D. Marshall and Miss Ethel G. Burditt. They led the fight and informed the citizens that if the Melrose schools were to be maintained on a high plane it would be necessary for the city to meet the wage scales of other cities.

They pointed out that Malden, Medford, Somerville, Everett, Cambridge, Winchester, Reading, Arlington and virtually all cities and towns within twenty miles of Melrose were paying teachers much higher wages than teachers received in Melrose.

"Many of our teachers have been lured to other cities," said Miss Washburn, "because they were given better salaries. Others are leaving us at the close of the present school year and unless the advance of last year is restored we are going to lose others. This does not augur well for the boys and girls in Melrose. To keep competent teachers in our schools we must pay them adequate wages. If we don't they will leave."

TEACHERS SCARCE.

Members of the school board assert that they have searched diligently candles, but because of the wage cut it has been almost impossible to obtain trained teachers.

Three arguments proved effective with Aldermen and they have indi-

CABINET MEN IN DRUG FIGHT

Three Members Direct Campaign to Wipe Protest

By Universal Service

Washington, June 3.—Three members of President Harding's cabinet have assumed personal direction of the campaign to wipe out drug addiction in the United States.

Secretaries Hughes, Mellon and Hoover have formed what is to be known as the anti-narcotic advisory board by the appointment of three experts from their departments. This board is to function under the provisions of the Jones-Miller law, a measure just enacted at the instance of the Hearst newspapers, to prevent foreign nations using the United States as a dumping ground for habit-forming drugs.

The board will hold its first meeting today. It has been instructed to draw up the most drastic regulations consistent with the intent of the new law and submit them to the cabinet officers at the earliest date. The three cabinet members will then hold a meeting for the formal approval of the regulations and put them into effect at once.

The members of the advisory board are: Edwin L. Neville, State Department; Henry Haywood, Treasury Department, and R. R. Eldridge, Department of Commerce.

BOSTON ART CLUB SHOW NOW OPEN

Big Gallery Well Filled at Annual Mid-Year Exhibition

By JEAN NUTTING OLIVER

An exhibition that we I noticed today is the general show of the Boston Art Club, a re- ar- artist members of this organization are now holding the annual summer exhibition. The big gallery is well-lined in a new manner and by its purpose at the season when, a person, or rather, in the best modernity should ever given by the club.

An important portion the display is given to the work by local artists, many of whom are resident. Summer Morning, a handsomely made one, with good figure composition. A fair painted young woman in short sleeved sweater is seen at the side of a body of water, and the whole picture glistens in the light. Another very modern picture is Hunting on the half Shore. A pink-faced fox-hunting lady is riding with a dog in or at on the tender left ground, a pleasant landscape only in its variety of color and in the sense of space. The design has a good deal of skillness but it seems a bit overdone. There are also

In the Boston Upper gallery there are a large number of paintings of which we have not room to speak. Among the more interesting are the following: Sweet Hope and Other Songs, by Ethel B. Comins; Leonore—Sch., by Adriana Wooster.

GLASS HILL PUZZLE TO ENGINEERS

Solid Mountain of It in Yellowstone Removed in Odd Way

HEAT AND WATER DID THE TRICK

Glass Road Through the Park Is Good One, but Hard on Tires

Ever heat of a mountain of glass? Or a glass road?

No, this isn't a yarn about a glass pyramid in the rear of somebody's bottle factory, nor a story of a broken-bottle road police trap for speeders.

A mountain of solid glass was the biggest problem confronting the construction engineers who built the magnificent road system which is one of the finest artificial features of the Yellowstone National Park.

How they solved the problem by methods hitherto unheard of in road construction is one of the most interesting freak stories in the history of engineering.

When the special geological report of the scientists attached to the United States Geological Survey was submitted to the U. S. Government engineers, before construction work was started, nothing very remarkable was noted, except the statement that for three-quarters of a mile along the proposed river route there was a seemingly impenetrable mountain of glass running sheer down to the river.

ATTACK ON MOUNTAIN.

Road construction was started in other parts of the immense domain, while the engineers prepared to attack the mountain, which was really a survival of the Cretaceous and subsequent Tertiary periods.

Giant blasting powders and heavy charges of dynamite were used, with as little effect on the adamant glass wall as a wooden mallet. Finally, when all the usual methods had failed, a surveyor with the engineering party, who had formerly been a glass-blower, suggested heating the mountain and spraying it afterward with water to make it disintegrate.

Since the standard methods had proved unsuccessful the engineers were inclined to think this idea might be practicable. Accordingly great logs were hauled and piled along the base of the mountain and the fires started along the three-quarter-mile section of the proposed route.

Energetic crews piled logs on the fire for several days, and after the desired heat had been registered the intrepid engineers directed the spraying of the mountain face with water from the river below.

MOUNTAIN EXPLODED.

The entire face of the mountain exploded in huge chunks, the deafening reports being heard for many miles. The experiment was a complete success. About half of the space was cleared, and after another trial they had room enough for a Roman chariot race.

The chunks of glass were found to be admirably adapted for road-building, so they were used as the base with the smaller pieces on top. The temperature changes in the park causes continual chipping of the mountain, resulting in the surface of the road being covered with small pieces of this glass like material which, ground down by constant traffic, make a very durable roadbed.

This short three-quarter mile stretch of road, while wonderfully constructed and built to last for centuries, is unequaled anywhere in the world for its ability to inflict punishment on automobile tires. Because of the abrasive forces encountered the tires must have a very tough tread and give the utmost in traction

Small Cars Carry Greatest Number Persons

A comprehensive inquiry as to the average number of passengers carried in an automobile shows some interesting facts. The country-wide average is one and seven-tenths. Personal observations at six cities show that even on Sunday, when the number of passengers carried per car might naturally be supposed to be the largest, the average is less than four. On week days the average corresponds very closely with the average for the country—less than 2 per cent.

This is only another indication of the reason for the steadily increasing popularity of the small car. Aside from the most important consideration of low first cost, low maintenance and ease of repair because of standardization of parts, the car that holds the smallest number of people is of the greatest use the greatest part of the time.

MOTORCYCLE MAKES NEW MILE RECORD

The world's motorcycle record for the mile was beaten by Jim Davis, riding an Indian at Beverly Hills, California Speedway on April 23. He covered the distance in 32 53. This is traveling at the rate of 110.68 miles per hour, and breaks the world's record for the distance by .41 seconds.

NASH PLANT TO ENLARGE

Work on Addition to Milwaukee Factory Starts Soon

Enlargement of the Nash Four factory at Milwaukee to provide production capacity that will insure nearly cars for the demand for this product, is planned by the Nash Motors Company. Final arrangements for the addition have been made and contractors will begin operations within the next few days.

A new body and sheet metal plant, 100x400 feet and three stories high, will provide facilities to make possible the production of the Nash Four almost in its entirety in the Milwaukee plant of the Nash Motors Company. At present certain parts of the car are made in the Nash Six plant at Kenosha. The new facilities will mean much to both factories.

"While the substantial addition to our Milwaukee plant will give us increased production facilities," said C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Company, "it will not relieve the pressure much before early Spring. I say this for the reason that building operations and installation of machinery always takes considerable time. We are rushing the work as rapidly as possible, but in view of the oversold condition of the Nash Four and the increasing demand for this model, I do not wish to be placed in the position of extending false hopes of increased production in the immediate future.

"The Milwaukee plant with its present facilities is building an excellent car and while a reduction of the Nash Four has been greatly increased in the past four months, we are very careful to safeguard the value of this product. We want to fill all orders just as badly as our dealers want these cars and that is why we have begun work on the plant extension which, when completed, will give us increased production in an orderly and efficient manner."

The extension to the Nash Four cylinder car plant was planned a little more than a year ago, but actual work on the construction was postponed to await more favorable building conditions

AUTOS NOW CLASSED AS MISLAID ARTICLES

Automobiles are now sometimes classed as mislaid articles, along with umbrellas, parcels, etc. This was brought about when Ernest Rougg, of East Orange, N. J., walked away from his machine on the Weehawken ferry, on reaching Jersey City, and forgot all about it. After placing his car on the boat with other vehicles, he entered the cabin to read a newspaper, and when the shore was reached he landed with foot passengers and took a taxicab to his office.

Mountain Road Signs

Road signs at the tops of mountain grades in Maryland inform motorists of the number of miles down the mountain, warn of dangerous curves and give concise instructions how to drive to avoid accidents.

DETOURS AND DANGEROUS ROADS IN NEW ENGLAND

Readers of the Sunday Advertiser have furnished valuable information relative to road conditions in this territory, the most important of which is published below:

CONNECTICUT ROADS.

Willimantic, Ct.

Motor Tour Information Bureau, Boston Advertiser.

Dear Sirs.

The road from Columbia, Ct., to Hebron, Ct., is finished for nearly two miles of cement road, but the balance of the way is very rough and there are many ruts. I know from experience in going over same.

MILFORD TO MENDON.

Milford.

Boston Advertiser.

The main road from Milford to Mendon (Lake Nipsmuck Amusement Park) is in a poor condition at present and is hardly fit for travel, but, by taking the Spindleville road, which, although a country road, is in good condition, much better traveling conditions may be obtained.

To reach this road, which is only slightly off the main highway, turn to the left after passing the Milford Hospital.

GOOD MAINE ROAD.

Gentlemen.—I may say that the road between Prospect and Stockton Springs, Maine which has been under construction for the past year has been opened and seems to me to be one of the best roads in the State—three miles in length.

BAD ROAD IN CONN.

Taftville, Ct.

Dear Sir.—While on a trip to Putnam last week I found that the road for a stretch of about three miles near Moosup was in a very bad condition. I also found that the tunnel near Jewett City was a very bad place should two cars meet, it being very narrow.

ROAD REPAIRS.

Barre, Mass.

Dear Sir.—There is a detour on the State road from Ware to Hardwick where repairs are being made. The roads are in good shape from Barre by way of Dana, No. Dana, Greenwich Village, Enfield and Ware.

DETOUR IN MAINE.

Bingham, Me.

Dear Sir.—Between Hinckley and Skowhegan for a distance of four and a half miles the State road is under repair. At Hinckley a detour is made over a good road which starts at the top of the hill in Skowhegan leading to the Kennebec River bridge.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ROADS

Somersworth, N. H.

Gentlemen—On a recent trip from Somersworth to Boston we found the Newington detour in terrible condition.

Portsmouth roads fair—Lafayette Road fair in most places.

DETOUR NEAR FALL RIVER

Fall River

Gentlemen:—The main road between Fall River and New Bedford is being torn up on Pleasant street in Fall River, otherwise known as "Hogin Hill." You can avoid this by taking Fleides street on your right.

DETOUR NEAR BROCTON

Brockton

Dear Sirs:—I can say there is a great need of better roads between Brockton and Wrentham. Was over there Sunday, May 28th, and in returning to the road branching from Marshall's Corner to West Bridgewater found conditions in pretty bad shape. About the only good way to go is through Stoughton which makes it about 7 miles farther.

CROSS ROAD BAD.

To Motor Information Bureau:

Chelmsford Centre and North Billerica is in bad shape, although passage is possible; also road between Oakland Square (Lowell, Mass.) (Boylston street) to what is known as the old Lewsbury road and connecting with High street in North Billerica is passable, but unsafe, although used extensively by Boston and Lowell drivers. Would suggest that attention be called to strangers about very bad approach to Boylston street bridge. I thank you.

IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Motor Tour Information, Boston Advertiser, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

The State road connecting Portsmouth and New Castle by way of the Hotel Wentworth is under excessive repairs. No detour is necessary. Completed in two more weeks.

Good roads everywhere in Portsmouth, N. H., and New Castle, N. H. All slate or macadam.

MOHAWK TRAIL ROAD.

I would appreciate it very much if you would send me a copy of your New England road map. In connection with bad roads, detours, etc., I would advise you that on the 21st I find the highway from Shelburne to Charlemont on the Mohawk Trail road, under reconstruction by the State Department, passable, but very badly rutted, due to the heavy hauling of road materials.

DANGEROUS ROAD.

Gentlemen — The Hockamock Swamp road—main road between Taunton and Rockland—is in dangerous condition, and all machines are forced to travel about five miles an hour. The best way is to go by way of Bridgewater—an excellent road and not much longer.

BEST WAY TO DOVER.

On a recent trip to Dover, N. H., I went by way of Andover, Haverhill, Amesbury, Exeter and Dover. The roads from Amesbury to Dover were very poor, principally dirt roads, ledges, ruts and hollows. On the return trip I came by way of Portsmouth onto the Lafayette road up through Newburyport, Salem and Lynn, which I found the best way, the only bad place being from the outskirts of Portsmouth to Dover Point. One of your road maps would be very much appreciated.

GRADING ROAD.

The road as you leave Acton, Mass., that leads through South, Centre and North Chelmsford, thence into Lowell, Mass., is at present being graded, so that will leave a perfect as well as a short route into Lowell from Boston via Concord, Lexington, Acton, Carlisle and the Chelmsfords. If I should note any other changes I will gladly co-operate with you further.

CHICAGO PLANS 25 STORY GARAGE

Among the latest novelties of automobile conveniences is a proposed automatic garage of twenty-five stories in Chicago, to cost $1,200,000. After the owner or driver deposits the car in the building an elevator carries it upstairs and stores it in its allotted space. All the work is accomplished by a women operating at a keyboard on the first floor.

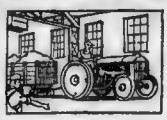
1,500 MOTOR EXPRESS LINES IN U. S., REPORT

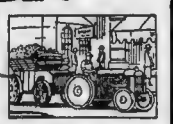
There are 986 motor express lines in the United States which have been listed at the offices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The total number of motor express lines in the United States is estimated at 1500. The tendency each year is toward consolidation with fewer lines doing a larger business.

NEW CURVE SIGNAL TO HAVE TRIAL

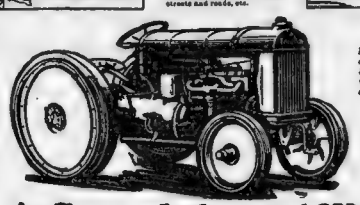
The Pennsylvania State Highway Department proposes to test mirror danger signals to warn motorists of bad curves at night. The signal consists of a huge red "bulls-eye" with a strong reflector behind the glass. No light is placed in warning signal, but when the light from a motor vehicle strikes it, it reflects a red signal to the approaching motorist.

Fordson TRACTOR





Town freight cars pulls tons of materials about factories, hauls trailers loaded with lumber, coal and crushed stone, drags logs, does excavating and hoisting; crushes stone; mixes concrete; drives piles; hauls street sweeping equipment; plows snow and hauls it away; grades and rolls streets and roads, etc.



Fordson Tractor equipped with Solid Rubber tired wheels for factory and street use.

A Great Industrial Worker

There isn't any doubt about the dependability, adaptability, efficiency or economy of the Fordson Tractor. These things have all been proved by the most severe tests on farms all over the country where more than 170,000 of them are in daily use.

Light, easy to handle and operate in small spaces, there is absolutely no doubt about the practicability of the Fordson for industrial uses. This has been proved by manufacturers in most every line, construction and excavating engineers, cementing contractors, coal and building supply concerns, street and road building contractors, cities, towns and villages

You can undoubtedly apply a Fordson to your line of business. Let's talk it over. It will interest you to get all the details.

500-MILE AUTO RACE A HUMMER

All Records Go by Board at Indianapolis, Yet the Day Is Accident-Free

DEMONSTRATION OF SAFE SPEED

Cars Practically Stock Models, as Popular Appliances Were the Rule

By J. C. KERRISON.

Search as you may the motor racing annals of the world and you will not find recorded such a wonderful contest as the 500-mile sweepstake race as ridden in Indianapolis this week.

It was not a long series of hair-breadth escapes, hair raising and exciting brushes, moments when spectators loose their sense of proportion at the masterly handling of speeding, fighting and snorting racing motor vehicles, but rather it was an excellent exhibition of what can be accomplished in the way of speed by the up-to-date motor race, without seemingly endangering the life and limbs of the participants.

MASTERLY DISPLAY.

It was nothing more nor less than a masterly display of speed, speed, speed, lacking everything of a sensational nature in any other direction. True it is that many of the cars fell by the wayside, but that was the result of overdriving, rather than constructional weaknesses, and when everything is said and done, it must be admitted that the contest proved one thing more than any other—the thorough reliability of the present day motor car.

While to the great mass of people, contests such as this are looked upon merely as a sporting event, to the motor designer and mechanic they are much more important, as they develop defects in design, construction and material if such there are, which would not be discovered in the life of the average motor car.

And the discovery and elimination of such defects have always in the past, and will always in the future, make it possible to develop a vehicle that will carry one over the roads with the least danger of accident.

INTEREST TWO CLASSES.

And so the Indianapolis races are watched by two classes, one looking for the thrills, the other looking toward the greater development of a great industry.

The former, if in search of fatalities, was fortunately satisfactorily disappointed and the latter discovered no fundamental weaknesses, even though five of the first ten cars to finish surpassed the track record of 89.84 miles an hour, established by Ralph DePalma in 1915.

8-CYLINDER TRIUMPH.

And speaking about cars brings to mind the fact that of the cars entered seventeen were of the eight cylinder type, and the majority of these were right in line; thirteen were of the four and two of the six cylinder type. The winning car that driven by Jimmy Murphy who averaged 94.48 miles an hour and who won approximately $35,000 in prize money and many trophies, was of the eight-in-line type, possessing more speed than any car ever seen on the track.

He took the lead on the very first lap and was never once headed, and his average for the entire 500 miles was almost as great as the average speed in the last twenty-five miles which is usually the fastest period of all races.

He stopped at the 150—300 and 450 miles respectively and it was noticeable that for the ten miles prior to each of thes stops he always attained an average of about 100 miles an hour, and he had reserve speed at all times.

Murphy broke into the racing game in 1916, as the mechanic of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker who on this occasion gave him both the starting and finishing flag.

Harry Harts who finished second likewise kept ahead of the field throughout the contest. But never was he a dangerous claimant for first honors

That smaller and lighter cars could make such improvement in speed was made possible only by the improvement in design, balance, ignition, tire equipment, oiling and cooling devices of the vehicle themselves, plus the ability of the drivers.

STOCK EQUIPMENT.

And it certainly is interesting to note that all of the cars were equipped with practically the same appliances as are to be found on the stock cars, such as you and your friends drive from day to day.

Take for instance the matter of ignition all save one of the ten prize winners were equipped with the Delco ignition system, found on so many of the stock cars of today, the single exception being the foreign car, which was magneto equipped. But even the foreigners are rapidly adopting Delco.

Then in the way of tires all the prize winners used the same quality tire as one buys for his own car, the day when special tires were made for racing having gone by the board and so as a matter of fact the cars were stock equipped if they were not stock cars.

TEST FOR BALANCE AT VELIE PLANT

"Six-cylinder construction is one of the most impressive phases of the development of cars to their ideal performance today," said F. E. Bradfield, vice-president of Velie Motors Corporation, while in Boston on a visit to the New England Velie Company, distributors of Velie products, on Tuesday last.

"As long ago as 1915 the six-cylinder engine held approximately half the field. At the present time about 60 per cent. of the manufacturers are making sixes. In other words, there are more manufacturers producing sixes than all other types combined. This," says a recognized authority, 'is due to the fact as well as all engineers know, that the six-cylinder engine is in absolute theoretical and practical balance provided it is properly designed.'

"In the Velie-built motor the theoretical balance is entirely realized by a large crankshaft with four heavy bronze backed bearings, the most exact relation of all moving parts and our super-test of running balance which all motors built in our big motor plant must pass.

HORSE RACES ANCIENT 'CAD'

"One-Lung" Cadillac and Gelding Have Brush on Commonwealth Ave.

Commonwealth avenue was the scene of a near-riot when J. H. Bates, the Cadillac dealer of Woburn, clad in regulation jockey suit of red coat white breeches and riding boots and mounted on a beautiful chestnut gelding, raced one of the old-time "one-lung" Cadillacs down the avenue from the Boston Cadillac salesroom to the Hotel Kenmore. Seldom has such an incongruous scene been witnessed on this bustling highway of motor-traffic—but all the events surrounding the contest were equally unusual.

The gelding was the prize offered by Albion L. Danforth, president of the Boston Cadillac Company to the dealer making the best sales record in the New England territory. One of the conditions of the contest was that the winner had to prove his fitness for the prize by not only selling the biggest quota of Cadillacs, but by his ability to navigate the prize in the race, to the dinner at the Kenmore and then to his home.

In fulfillment of his agreement, Mr. Bates not only beat the Cadillac by a goodly margin—but arrived home, tired and happy, and steadfast in his allegiance to the more modern form of conveyance

The contest was part of a general sales-program, resulting in the biggest May business ever turned in by the local Cadillac company. New car sales of the Type 61 were 100 per cent. in excess of the corresponding month last year. In fact the past five months have been record-breakers for the local distributors.

During the dinner at the Kenmore, the winners of the retail contest were present with prizes of General Motors stock. These prizes went to Harold D. Bornstein, winner of the first prize; Edward G. Fitz-Henry, winner of the second prize, and Frank B. Bancroft, winner of the third prize in the new car division. Winners in the used car division were: First, W. L. Shepard; second, Wilbur L. Keith; third, L. M. Severance.

1,000,000 in Road Army

Highway construction in the United States is one of the nation's largest industries, and an army of 1,000,000 men labored last year throughout the road building season in making and repairing highways.

One Motor Car for Every Third St. Louis Family

ST. LOUIS now leads both New York and Chicago in the ratio of automobiles per families. According to last year's registration of 68,000, which includes both passenger and commercial cars, there is one automobile to every three families in St. Louis, while in New York there is one car for every eight families, and Chicago one to every seven families.

Detroit, the home of the automobile, now probably ranks first among all cities in the world, as the present ratio is one car for each 7.73 persons.

Automobile Drivers May Be Checked Up With Ease Under Plan

New York, June 3.—The Board of Aldermen has by a vote of 54 to 3 passed the traffic card ordinance which provides that every driver of a motor or horse-drawn vehicle must procure a traffic card from the Police Department and have his photograph attached to it. The card will contain five spaces for recording violations of minor traffic rules which must be punched by the traffic officer. After the fifth violation has been punched in the card and there is another violation the officer will serve a summons.

Special Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Harriss, who originated the plan told the board that the passage of the ordinance would keep many traffic policemen on the streets. At the present time, he said, there were between 200 and 300 in the Traffic Court every day. He said it would not only keep the policeman on his post but would lessen the work of the court, now congested with trivial violations. The ordinance now goes to the Mayor for his acceptance or veto. It is understood that he will sign it.

DON'T CARRY NEW TIRES AS SPARES

It is a mistake to carry new tires as spares. The epidemic of tire stealing that prevails throughout the country has demonstrated the avidity of tire thieves for tires that have never been used and can be disposed of as new. A new tire naturally brings a much higher price than one that shows wear. Motorists whose new spares have been stolen with unfailing regularity should remember that they have been offering tempting bait to the thieves. The sensible thing to do is to use a new tire for a few hundred miles before using it as a spare.

GARDNER CAR IS GROWING RAPIDLY

George Leghorn, of the Leghorn Motors Company, has received figures from the Gardner Motor Company that offer substantial evidence of the rapidly growing popularity of the Gardner car. In announcing Mr. Leghorn said: "New England has accepted the Gardner.

Throughout the New England States, we are now represented in practically all of the dealer centres and at every point sales are running very much ahead of last year's figures. Since January 1st sales in New England show an increase of 261 per cent over last year, and in Boston sales to date are 664 per cent over the same period in 1921. These figures indicate conclusively the increasing popularity of the Gardner in New England. But this increase is not limited to this section alone.

"All over the country the Gardner is going big with unfilled orders at the factory requiring capacity production until August 15th to take care of immediate deliveries. There never was a better demonstration of the claim that merchandise will, regardless of conditions, if reasonable a offered to the purchaser.

"Here is proof furnished in the sales figures of other cities, showing the year's sales to June 1st compared with last year: Billings 880 per cent, New York City 983 per cent St. Louis 243 per cent Roanoke 275 per cent Chicago 315 per cent, Minneapolis 410 per cent, Boston 261 per cent, Los Angeles 400 per cent Baltimore 170 per cent Washington 346 per cent Pittsburgh 16 per cent, Dallas 155 per cent, Portland 840 per cent, Seattle 230 per cent Spokane 740 per cent San Francisco 255 per cent, Denver 824 per cent, Philadelphia 193 per cent, Cleveland 691 per cent, Des Moines 435 per cent, Buffalo 200 per cent, Cincinnati 200 per cent Omaha 40 per cent, Salt Lake City 100 per cent Atlanta 400 per cent, Montreal 100 per cent and Little Rock 100 per cent

1,127,000 Trucks Listed

The rapid growth in the use of motor trucks is indicated by the registration for 1921, which is 1,127,000, or about ten times the number in use in 1914

An Automobile Is a Valuable Vacation Accessory

The chief value of a vacation — especially the week-end vacation—to the busy indoor worker is getting out into the open air and sunshine, and nothing aids in the accomplishment of this end like an automobile.

To own a car is not a luxury. Indeed, you cannot plan a more satisfying vacation at less cost than to purchase a good car and go touring through the country, with congenial companionship, behind your own steering wheel.

The place to pick such a car is from the "Automobile" columns of the Sunday Advertiser. Here the enterprising owners and dealers of Boston list and describe new and used models and thus give to our great clientele of readers early opportunity to select from the newest and best of them.

Proclaiming Delco Supremacy

When the famed Checkered Flag signalled victory on the Indianapolis speedway Memorial Day, it again proclaimed Delco Ignition winner of this international 500-mile classic.

The winning Murphy special, driven by Jimmy Murphy, was Delco-equipped.

But an even more remarkable tribute to Delco's uniform dependability was the fact that the first, second, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth car to thunder across the winning line were likewise Delco-equipped.

This dramatic performance was a repetition of Delco supremacy at Indianapolis last year, when the first ten cars across the line had Delco ignition.

In 1920, seven of the first ten cars to finish, including the winner, were also Delco-equipped.

In establishing records on the Indianapolis and other famous race tracks — besides national and world records of speed and endurance on water and in the air, as well as on land—Delco simply gives evidence, under the most gruelling tests imaginable, of that fine dependability and reliable performance that more than a million and a half owners of Delco-equipped cars have come to take as a matter of course.

This additional victory at Indianapolis is also a high compliment to all manufacturers of quality cars who use Delco as standard equipment for ignition, as an evidence that they elect to make price secondary to quality.

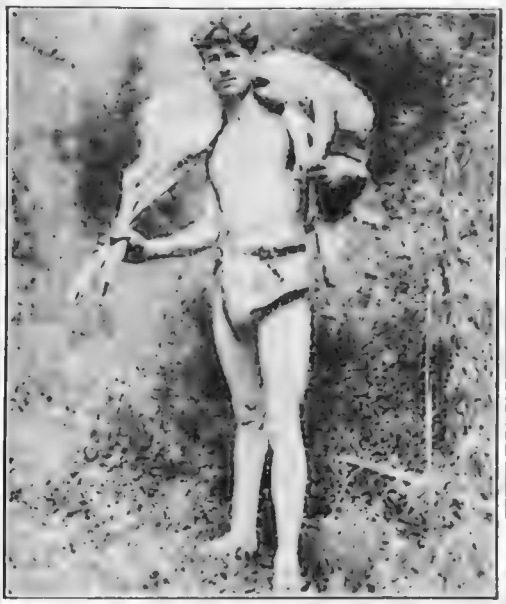
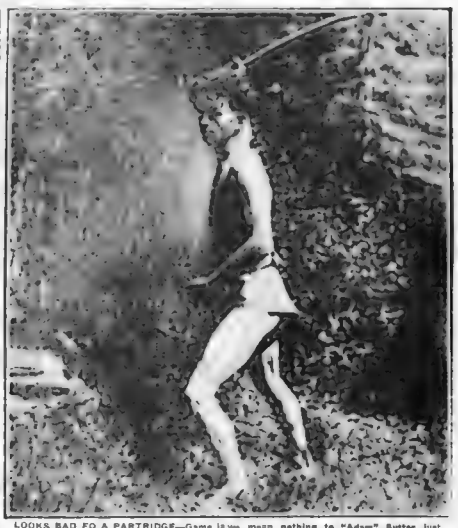
ALL SET FOR A SQUARE MEAL AND SOME CLOTHES—Bruin stole most of Adam's buck, but not before the primitive pair had eaten their fill and manufactured moccasins and rude clothes from deerskin.



NEW WORRY FOR ADAM AND EVE—Mr. and Mrs. Sutter, relieved of starvation, are now disturbed to learn that a party of so-called "sportsmen" proposes to run them to earth. Adam says it will be "some chase."



LOOKS BAD FO A PARTRIDGE—Game is no mean nothing to "Adam" Sutter just now. When he's hungry he goes and gets anything he can. Here he is about to hurl [illegible] at a trusting grouse.

EVE DOESN'T SEEM SORRY FOR THE UNFORTUNATE DEER—You wouldn't, either, if it represented a venison steak after you had been living on trout and roots for two weeks.

ONE OF ADAM'S DEADFALLS—A snare cunningly devised of heavy logs, waits the unwary animal invader near the Sutter tsante. Adam has had poor luck with his traps thus far.

ADAM AND EVE GET FIRST REAL MEAL—This luckless buck was the first animal of consequence to fall victim to Adam's snares. Next morning a bear got away with most of it

GEORGETOWN CONQUERS HOLY CROSS NINE EASILY, 8 TO 3

24 STRAIGHT FOR COLLEGE CHAMPIONS

Tunney, Purple Star, Is Batted From the Box in Seventh

ERRORS AID TEAM FROM WASHINGTON

Reynolds Pitches Good Ball, Especially With Men on Bases

Worcester, June 3.—Georgetown defeated Holy Cross, 8 to 3, at Fitton Field today, incidentally annexing the intercollegiate championship and winding up its season with 24 straight wins.

Georgetown hit Tunney, the Purple star, hard and forced him to retire in the seventh when four hits and a pair of errors gave the Washington boys four runs and the game. Reynolds pitched good ball, tightening up with men on the bases and holding Holy Cross scoreless until his teammates had annexed seven runs.

HOLY CROSS OFF FORM

Holy Cross was way off form, Gagnon's error contributing to all the Georgetown runs. Barry's boys could not do much at bat with men on bases, several times missing chances to score.

Georgetown started right off with a run in the first. J. R. Murphy filed out but Sheridan was safe on Gagnon's error. Rheedy cracked out a single to right. Kenyon flied out, but J. R. Murphy scored on J. E. Murphy's safe hit to centre. Rheedy was run down between second and third.

Holy Cross put two on in their half, but Simondinger could not come through with the needed hit.

A pair of fast double plays, Maguire to Gagnon to Doherty, was all that stopped further Georgetown scoring in the third and fifth.

The Blue and Gray put over two more runs in the sixth. Sheridan opened up with a single to right, shortly moved him along with a sacrifice. Kenyon sent one down to short which Gagnon muffed and both men were safe. J. E. Murphy bounced a freak hit off Tunney's shoe and Sheridan scored. Kenyon went to second. Reynolds was passed, filling the bases. Florence flied to Simondinger. Kenyon scored after the catch but J. E. Murphy was caught trying to make third.

DRIVE TUNNEY TO SHOWERS.

Four runs put the game on ice in the seventh and sent Tunney to the showers for the first time in his college career! Malley drove a hot one past third. Flavin also singled and Tunney spoiled a double play when he deflected Ryan's throw into right field, Malley and Flavin scoring. Sheridan hit to Gagnon, who threw out Murphy at third.

Rheedy singled. Kenyon fouled out to Maguire, but both runners advanced when Gagnon muffed the throw. J. E. Murphy doubled into the crowd, Sheridan and Rheedy scoring. Tunney was retired and Carroll went in to pitch. He struck out Reynolds to end the inning.

Holy Cross got a couple in the seventh on a pass to Maguire, Doherty's long single J. R. Murphy's error on Carroll's grounder and Leo Dugan's hit through short.

Each team got one in the eighth Georgetown on a pass, Malley's single, and Gagnon's error on J. R. Murphy. A pass and error and Doherty's long double gave the Purple a counter.

Carroll pitched good ball while he worked, striking out four of the Georgetown sluggers who already had made hits off Tunney.

FLAVIN STARS AT THIRD.

Flavin played a great game at third for Georgetown, making a couple of cracks that looked like hits, while Rheedy looked great on throws across the diamond. J. E. Murphy got three hits in five trips to the plate, including a double that scored two runs. Maguire played a great game in the field for Holy Cross, starting a pair of doubles that stopped further scoring.

In spite of threatening weather, the crowd, estimated at 10,000, was the second largest ever to turn out at Fitton Field, being exceeded only by the 15,000 present last Tuesday for the Boston College game. Holy Cross, in four games this week, has played to 35,000 people.

YALE OUTBATS PRINCETON 14-5

New Haven, June 3.—Yale pounded three Princeton pitchers, Townsend, Beebe and Thomas, heavily today, subjugating the Tigers with a 14 to 5 defeat, in the opening game of their annual series. Charley O'Hearn led in the bombardment with two three-baggers, accounting for three Eli runs.

The Tigers, however, clouted Ted Chittenden hard enough to win an ordinary game, finding him for three runs in the fifth on doubles to Dotting and Jefferies and singles by Gotschalk and McIlvain.

Yale batsmen got to Charley Townsend in the fifth for two runs, when, after two had been retired Crane singled and O'Hara slashed his first triple into deep left and scored on Hegg's wild throw to catch him at third.

Yale sent ten batsmen to the plate in the sixth, and drove Pitchers Townsend and Dick Beebe to cover, Thomas finishing the stanza.

For the Tigers, Captain McPhee and Jefferies played desperately in every department of the game.

FRIEDMAN TO FIGHT FAST GOTHAM BOXER

Clashes With Johnny Curtin of New York in Final Bout of All-Star Show at Mechanics Hall Tuesday Night

By S. J. (STEVE) MAHONEY

Boxing fans about these "dizgius" are happy. It looked for a few days last week as if things would be quiet. The Arena A. A. couldn't clinch the match it eagerly sought, so the directors decided to let the "off" switch remain stationary Monday night.

Like a flash out of a clear sky came the news that the Armory A. A. had arranged a show of the all-star variety, and, judging from the make-up of the card, it looks as if some real fighting will be produced.

The show will be staged Tuesday night and forty rounds of boxing will be seen. The ticket is headed by Johnny Curtin, the New York boy who has been knocking most of his opponents out, and Abe Friedman of this city.

This is card enough to bring most of the boys up, but it is supported by three other bouts, any one of which is good enough for features. Johnny Clinton and Pete Hartley are another big card.

Then there are Pete Hoban, a newcomer of class, and Billy Carney of New Bedford, and Mickey Travers and Tommy Noble, the English featherweight champion.

TUOHEY ON THE MEND.

George Tuohey, who has been in the hospital for several days, is on the mend. We discovered that yesterday when the genesive which follows was delivered at the Advertiser. His legion of friends will be pleased to learn of this. Herewith we print the letter, which indicates that George is as optimistic and enthusiastic as ever.

Cambridge City Hospital.

S. J. Mahoney, Boston Advertiser:

Dear Steve—I'm happy to be able to say that at last I'm able to sit up for about an hour a day, and that everything indicates a complete recovery from my operation and a restoration to perfect health.

I hope to be able to walk a bit in a few days, but I'll not force matters, especially as the "Missus" tells me everything is going fine with her Lewis-Caddock Championship match at the Arena next Wednesday night.

With kindest regards to yourself and all wrestling fans, I remain,

Yours for clean sport,

GEO. V. TUOHEY.

Al Caroly, matchmaker of the Valley Athletic Club of Holyoke, has offered Frankie Ryan of Everett a match with Jonny Corbett of Springfield. Both boys will weigh 126 pounds at 3 o'clock. Corbett is one of the best boys in New England at his weight. Corbett has won his last ten fights by the K. O. route.

CHAPMAN WINS REVERE EVENT

George Chapman, American motor pace champion, won the thirty-mile motor paced race before a large gathering at the Revere Cycle track last evening. A winning Chapman proved to the lovers of the bike game that he surely is American title holder, for he defeated saier Miquel of Paris, France and Vincent Madonna, the great Italian champion.

When Chapman crossed the finish mark, Miquel was trailing five laps, while the Italian had a hard time finishing two laps in the rear of Miquel. The time was forty-two minutes five and one-tenths seconds.

The special sprint match between Frank Cavanaugh and Willie Keller, both of Norwalk, N. J., proved to be a banner attraction. The race was won by Willie Keller in two straight heats. Keller and Cavanaugh took their time in the first heat and the final lap both got away like a shot from a gun and Willie Keller broke the tape by a margin of only a few inches.

In the second heat of one mile both riders went at it wild and at the bell lap Keller again sprung a surprise by downing Cavanaugh in fast time.

EXETER TAKES TRACK HONORS

Exeter, N. H., June 3.—Exeter won a close dual meet from Andover today by a score of 69½ to 64½. The Harvard and Boston running clubs discuss throw which gave Exeter the points which decided the meet.

C. B. Wright of Andover broke the dual record in the pole vault by going over the bar at 11 feet, 7½ inches. The former record of 11 feet 6 inches, held by Hitchcock of Exeter, was made in 1911.

Watters of Exeter won the half mile in 1.58 1-5, nearly a second slower than the record held by Bill Bingham. The surprise of the meet was the running of this event of O'Neil of Exeter, the favorite. He finished third, trailing Captain Allen of Andover, who captured second place.

The feature race was the 440-yard run in which the captains of the two teams, Allen of Andover and Lundell of Exeter, fought it out for the 220 yards. Allen took the pole at the first turn, but Lundell went into the lead on the back stretch and was never headed. The time was 51 4-5 seconds.

Cole of Andover, the favorite in the 220 yard hurdles, stumbled the first hurdle and was defeated by Budd of Exeter in 26 1-5 seconds.

BRAVES TAKE THREE STRAIGHT FROM GIANTS ON HOME YARD

KELLY IN GLARE OF SUN LOSES POP FLY AND TRIBE BEATS GIANTS AGAIN, 3-2

Nixon Blazes Way for Braves and Scores Tying Run on Kelly's Muff—Then Cruise and Holke Bang Out Victory in Ninth

By EDDIE HURLEY

THE strains of "Home Sweet Home" were wafting in the breeze. The singing sextet of the Giants huddled in a corner of the New York bench burst forth into song. They were happy. And why not? After dropping four straight games, it looked as though the jinx was finally chased. It was the eighth and the Giants had just scored a brace of runs giving 'em a 2 to 0 lead.

It looked like the last waltz "Home Sweet Home." Then somebody stepped on a blue note it was George Kelly. He's the first baseman of the Giants with quite some reputation as a homerun hitter.

George was humming the strains of the famous waltz as he stood out in the sun. Singing comes natural to "Homerun Kelly"

Things were peaches for Kelly until the sun butted into the picture. And when the sun shines in all its glory, a little thing like a baseball is lost in the glare. So it was yesterday. The ball and the sun collided and Kelly missed the ball. The Braves tied up the score. This was in the eighth.

And in the ninth, the Braves pelted across the big counter and stepped off with the third straight victory over the champions by the score of 3 to 2. And the singing sextet of the Giants was out to rout Hardly before they got under way. The befuddled Giants, who only a moment ago were roaring to go with a 2 to 0 lead under their belts dragged themselves back to shelter and the cool showers, while they wondered how it all happened

It was like this, as they chortle in the classics

The Braves and Giants were running neck and neck. It was a battle down to the stretch Then the Giants rolled out in front This occurred in the tragic eighth inning frame

Heine Groh, who swings the funny big bat in his own peculiar way, nearly knocked Hugh McQuillan right out of the pastime with a line drive through the box. It went for a single. Hugh rubbed his arm, but gamely stuck to his task, although he admits it caused him considerable pain.

Now Hugh was hurling brilliant ball and Fans wanted to see him stick in the thick of the battle True, the Giants were locating him, but when hits meant runs, McQuillan simply tightened up and refused to weaken.

It was a nip and tuck battle between McQuillan and Jesse Barnes and the Giants And for seven innings, there was little to choose between pitchers.

GIANTS SCORE TWO.

As set forth above, Groh pasted a drive through the box. This simply was the starter. "Irish" Meusel did his best to sacrifice, but a sizzling throw by Holke to Ford nipped Groh at second. And the fans roared of course

Ross Young, who always blazes forth in all his glory at the wigwam, shattered the hopes of the Polo-hunters with a drive to right it was good for two necks. Men on second and third and only one out George Kelly loomed up. Then the question was whether to pass the big hitter. It was decided to pitch to him. McQuillan did and Kelly drove in Nixon in center, while Meusel scored after the catch This run looked big, but when Cunningham swiped a safe shot to right, that second run looked like a million. Such a prospect was nothing to become excited about specially in view of the work of Barnes on the mound.

There were two out in the Braves' half of the inning. It looked horrible. Then "Hammering" Hank Gowdy loomed up. He picked out a big bat and the announcer piped off the throng that "Gowdy was batting for McQuillan."

That was the reason for "Home Sweet Home." Then somebody stepped on a blue note it was George Kelly. He's the first baseman of the Giants with quite some reputation as a homerun hitter

George was humming the strains of the famous waltz as he stood out in the sun Singing comes natural to "Homerun Kelly"

Joe Dugan, who came here from the Athletics. He is seen at the left making a standing high jump in order to spear a line drive with his left; above, at the right, the camera man caught him shaking his fist at the umpire, while below he is seen fielding a hard drive in his characteristic style.

RED SOX BEAT YANKS, 6-2, IN THE FIRST GAME; RAIN HALTS DUEL IN SEVENTH

Teams Waited While Downpour Lasted, Hoping to Finish the First and Then Play Second; the Cloudburst Continued and Second Was Called Off

New York, June 3.—The Boston Red Sox got in a lucky break here today. They got in seven innings of the first game of a double-header with the Yankees, enough to capture the tilt by a score of 6 to 2

The Sox also shared on a 28,000 double-header crowd. Had only one game been scheduled for today, it never would have been started as it started to rain at 2.15 and began pouring at 3 o'clock, which is regular Saturday game time here

George Moriarty kept the game going in a downpour for two innings but when the waves dashed against the home plate in the eighth "Morey" finally decided to give up before he was washed away.

Jack Quinn and Aleck Ferguson former Yanks, who have been pitching on the American League champs all season, again beat them this afternoon. Jack and Aleck defeated New York four times this season

QUINN WENT ALONG WELL.

Quinn went along in grand style for six innings, yielding only three hits, all of them coming after two were out in the third. However, Jack lost control of the wet ball in the seventh.

His splitter no longer would break. Schang singled with none out in the seventh, and he pitched three successive balls to Skinner, a pinch hitter.

Ferguson then came in, and promptly got two strikes over on Skinner, and retired him on an easy fly to Collins. He got rid of Witt and Ward with equal ease.

The Yanks drew first blood in the game, picking up a run with two gone in the third Jones singled to right, and took an extra base on John Collins' fumble. Witt stung a single to left centre, scoring Sam Ward also slapped a single to centre, but Ruth sent Menosky to the fence in deep centre for his long fly.

SNATCHED THE LEAD.

Boston snatched the lead in the fourth. Menosky walked with one out, the first Red Sox to reach base on Jones. Pratt singled to centre. Dugan soared to Ruth Menosky and Pratt both tore home on John Collins' throw over Ruth's head O'Rourke's errors enabled the Yanks to tie in the fifth Scott was safe on the shortstop's fumble and Schang pushed him to second with a sacrifice. Jones walked, and was forced by Witt, Sam taking third, Ward's fumble on Ward and slowed up the ball into short left. Scott scored and Witt reached third and Ward second. It was decided to pass the Bambino. Baker then raised a high infield fly to Ruel. The Sox jumped out in front with a batch of three runs in the sixth. Menosky singled to right, and took second on Pratt's sacrifice.

Dugan tore a hot one through Baker, scoring Menosky. After John Collins filled to Ruth, Burns lofted a home run in to the leftfield bleachers, scoring Dugan ahead of him.

Little Lebold gave Boston a sixth run in the seventh, knocking a homer into the lower rightfield stand.

The fielding sensation of the game was a diving catch made by George Burns on a liner by Scott in the sixth inning.

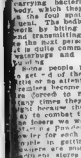
Cockroaches, Waterbugs and Bedbugs



This is an ideal combination to have on your premises at one time. Some unfortunate people here had three, but we still are having it. When you realize that these pests are all germ carriers of the worst type of diseases, you can gain some idea of what dangerous nuisance they are. Both the cockroaches and waterbugs contaminate food and water supplies by carrying bacteria on their feet and body, which they convey habitually from the foul harborages in their deadly haunts. Nothing persons who are sick and transmitting the germs of disease to the next person they happen to bite. It is quite common to find cockroaches, waterbugs and bedbugs in the same building.

Some people make strenuous efforts to get rid of them at once others pay little or no attention to them until they realize they become so badly infested they are forced to make war upon them. Many times they make an unsuccessful fight because they don't know the best way to combat them. For the benefit of these losers we will say that if you take a Powder-Puff there will be enough for each pest you will have to battle in getting rid of them. These powders are sold by all drug and department stores for 50c and $1.20 per can—one small for 25c and $1.20 per can are sure and money order stock or cash with my orders. As there are sixteen different powders, designate the one desired. All guaranteed to kill.

RIXEY MAKES IT 3 IN A ROW FOR REDS

Chicago, Ills June 3.—Col Eppa Fogtha Rixey, Jr., chased a pernicious jinx here today when he outpitched Vic Aldridge, leading the Reds to their third victory of the series, 4 to 2. The Northsiders had walloped the Virginian three times in a row prior to these proceedings.

Moran's towering southpaw was clubbed for eight hits, three coming together in the sixth inning for both the Cub markers The Reds combed Aldridge for ten safe swats, fumbling three in the sixth for two runs and assembling three more in the eighth for another brace Rixey's own shot won the game.

NEWTON WINS STADIUM SCHOOL MEET BY A HALF POINT

MEDFORD IS SECOND WITH TALLY OF 35

Running High and Broad Jump Records Are Bettered

MOORE TAKES 10 OF TEAM'S SCORE

Fairhaven Is Third and Lynn Classical in Fourth Place

By FRANK GAFFNEY

A scant half point was Newton High's victory margin over Medford High in the second annual outdoor track and field meeting of the Massachusetts High School Athletic Association yesterday afternoon at the Harvard Stadium.

Newton scored a high point total of 34½, while Medford had 35 points chalked to its credit in a tourney, which, despite the absence of the brilliant crop of Boston public high school athletes and more than a scattered few handfuls of spectators, provided thrills galore and several highly creditable performances.

TWO RECORDS GO.

Two records were bettered namely the running high and broad jumps.

Harrington (Hank) Moore stood out as the particular luminary of the affair "Hank" of Medford, chipped in with 10 of his team's 35 points in winning the century sprint and breaking the record in the running broad with a leap of 21 feet 7½ inches.

Fifteen schools of the 25 that had athletes entered in the meet scored as follows: Newton, 35½; Medford 35; Fairhaven, 19½; Lynn Classical 9 2-3, Rindge Tech, 6 1-3; Brockton, 5, Beverly, 4; Winthrop, 3½; Haverhill, 3½, Melrose 3, Framingham Somerville 2 1-2, Marlboro, 2 Sharon, 1, and Lowell 1

Points registered by competitors in senior events were omitted.

BATTLE TO FINISH.

The battle for first honors between Newton and Medford went right down to the final event and thus proved a fitting climax and finale.

With the completion of the program, exclusive of the team races, Newton led Medford a single point. Points were awarded to the relay teams according to their times. The team making the fastest time getting five points, the second fastest four and one half point and so on.

Medford and Newton with Lynn Classical came together in the closing race, Medford won a rousing able race. An idea of its closeness may be gleaned from the fact that the timers watches did not register any difference in time between the two. Medford's anchor man just shouldered his way across the finish line ahead of the Orange and Black number four runner.

The referee decided Medford should be given five points in the relay though its time was the same as Newton's, because the Blue and White Medford team had won the race

Newton displayed exceptional strength in the hurdle events, scoring a total of 13 points in the 120 high hurdles and 220-yard low hurdles as against a solitary point for Medforda in the same events Weakness in the timber topping races defeated Medford.

The members honored were: Card, Phillips, Mendes, Beckett, 1923; Stowers, Richmond, Place, 1923; Miller, Dodge, Weber, 1924, Davis, 1925.

In addition, the following have been awarded track insignia consisting of an "AWA":

FOOTBALL WORK IS DONE AT WILLIAMS

Williamstown, June 3.—Spring football practice, which was instituted for the first time at Williams college this year, has been completed, a squad of 50 or so men having participated in the workouts held

Only ends, backfield men and centres were called out. Owing to the fact that many of the veterans were engaged in baseball or track, most of the candidates were under class last year's freshman team being well represented.

Whether the practice of holding spring drills is continued, is doubtful. In the absence of Coach Wordell, the workouts were held under the direction of "Stew" Richmond and "Bill" Bigler, backfield veterans.

QUARTET OF CATCH-AS-CATCH-CAN STARS

THE FAMOUS $10,000 DIAMOND WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP WRESTLING BELT WON BY ED "STRANGLER" LEWIS.

FIRST GIRLS' SOCCER TEAM BEATS RANGERS

Men Take It Easy With Result That Lassies Get Lead and Hold It Stoutly to Finish on Strandway

By ANGUS CAMERON

Over a thousand people watched the first woman's soccer team to be organized in New England defeat the South Boston Rangers by the close score of six goals to five on the South Boston Strandway Park yesterday afternoon.

The winners call themselves the Ladies' Strandway Soccer Club and were organized by Mrs. Theresa McAlear and Marcella Donovan.

When the news was broadcasted that a team of women players was coming from England to tour the United States, the South Boston women, feeling that there are just as good girl athletes in this country, got their heads together and decided to start something themselves

The eleven for the most part is made up of High School girls and several of them showed lots of promise, especially Marion Graham, who played right back and who comes from a football family.

She has two brothers who are playing with Boston League teams, and her father can still play a good game between the sticks. Marion was easily the strongest kicker on the team. She stopped several offensive drives by the Rangers and scored on a penalty kick.

Marcella Donovan and Catherine Fraser showed that they knew where they were going to have an easy time, so they decided to take things easy for a while, but before they knew it the girls had put themselves three goals in the lead. At half-time the count was 5 to 2 for the ladies, and in the second half they scored one more, while the Rangers only collected two.

With three minutes to play the losers tried hard to tie the score, but failed to take things easy for a while, but before they knew it the girls had put themselves three goals in the lead. At half-time the count was 5 to 2 for the ladies, and in the second half they scored one more, while the Rangers only collected two.

BENNY LEONARD TO MEET BRITTON, TENDLER AND RICE

LEONARD TO BE BUSY BOXER SOON

Rice Bout Is Expected to Be Staged in English Ring

TENDLER TO GET HIS BIG CHANCE

Affair With Britton to Be Staged on June 13

By DAMON RUNYON.

Leonard-Britton, Leonard-Tendler, Greb-Carpentier, Dempsey-Wills, these matches that may be termed inevitable.

So much so, in fact, that it is almost a waste of space to follow the windy negotiations that always precede the actual signing up. The only news in any of them is the date and the scene.

The Leonard-Britton affair has been duly promulgated. It takes place on June 13, and means little in the life of fistiana. It is one of those twelve round no-decision things. There is nothing more to be said.

Leonard is not risking his lightweight title. If he should slip Britton on his long whiskers, which we consider extremely unlikely, Benny would be in possession of the welterweight title, but also in the position of Joe Tinker, the year he managed the Chicago Federal Leaguers.

"I think I am going to win the pennant this year," remarked Joe, to Christy Mathewson, of the Giants, as they crossed in transit at New Orleans that Spring.

"Is that so?" said Matty, disinterestedly. "Well, what are you going to do with it?"

The Leonard-Tendler bout will be more important, as it is a championship affair.

The lightweight champion of the world seems to be monopolizing the fistic news of the day just at present. Besides the announcement of the Britton match, and the plans for the Tendler match, it was stated from his headquarters that Benny is planning a trip abroad.

He is going to England, according to his voracious chroniclers, to fight Ernie Rice, the lightweight champion of England. The conditions of the match should be that Benny have one hand tied behind him and his feet in a hole.

Rice isn't even a good card in his own country, which is a line on his ability. Joe Benjamin tried to get a match with him when Joe was abroad with Dempsey, but the British promoters would not offer the price of ham and eggs for the bout. They said Rice would not draw.

CLASSY CANINES TO SHOW

These bluebloods of the dog world will be seen at the Elks show in Auburndale for the charity fund of the organization Ywey, a chow from the Cloverick Kennels of Framingham, is seen above. Pride's Hill Tweek 'Em is seen below. This clever terrier is owned by Show McKane of this city.

The Ladies' Kennel Association will hold its annual open air dog show June 9 for the benefit of the Newton Lodge of Elks at Auburndale.

Each year this show has created a great deal of interest and is always looked forward to as one of the most prominent events in dog show circles.

Mr. W. M. G. Clark, superintendent of the show, has done everything to make it a success. All the equipment, including the benches, are new and every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of disease.

This is the largest of the air shows held in New England. The judges will start at 10:30 A. M. and continue throughout the day until closing.

It is estimated that a record crowd will attend, owing to the fact that the number of entries far exceed any year previous.

GRAY & DAVIS IN 3 TO 2 TRIUMPH

The Gray & Davis soccer team secured a tighter hold on first place in the Boston and District League at ullivan square yesterday by defeating St. Georges three goals to two.

It was inclined to be rough, and as a result Jimmy Hunt is in the hospital and Egbers had several stitches taken in a cut over one eye.

The Grays were first to draw blood when Grant registered. Hanson broke away and equalized shortly afterward. It was nip and tuck until St. Georges gave away a penalty which was netted by Coulthard.

Early in the second Bailey registered which again evened. George Reid booted in the winning goal.

MIDDLESEX CREWS GAIN 2 TRIUMPHS

The Middlesex School first and second four-oared crews closed their seasons yesterday by winning their annual one-half-mile races from the Pomfret (Ct.) School first and second crews, over the Middlesex course on Bateman's Pond, in North Concord.

The Middlesex varsity four rowed a very pretty race, breaking the time record for the course by 11-5 seconds.

The order of the crews was as follows:

Middlesex School First—Four-oared crew—Bow, Krumbiegel; No. 2, Browning; No. 3, Griffin; captain; stroke, Merrill; coxswain, Miller.

Pomfret School First—Four-oared crew—Bow, Reeve; captain; No. 2, Chisholm; No. 3, Boerkin; stroke, Drage; coxswain, Alexander.

Sculling Race Off

Philadelphia, June 3.—A succession of severe thunder storms today resulted in postponement of the sculling races for the Philadelphia gold challenge cup.

B. C. NINE TO HAVE BIG WEEK

Boston College will start its last week of baseball tomorrow afternoon at Alumni Field, by playing the nine from St. Francis College, Worcester, the only home game of four until the final contest with Holy Cross on June 17. The Eagles will play Princeton at Princeton on Thursday, and on the return trip, will stop off at New London to play the United States Submarine Base nine on Friday, and the Massachusetts Aggies at Amherst on Saturday.

Until last Tuesday, the Eagles were riding high toward the top of the intercollegiate list, with seven victories and a single defeat On Memorial Day, Holy Cross trimmed the Eagles by an 8 to 1 score, knocking B. C.'s previous pitcher from the box. Right on top of this defeat, the Maroon and Gold nine attempted to stop the undefeated Georgetown team, but failed again. Incidentally, the Georgetown team is the only one that has succeeded in blanking the Maroon and Gold this season.

HOT TILT WITH TIGERS.

As Boston College had no difficulty in mowing 23 runs off the Submarine Base twirlers in their first meeting, Princeton and the Mass. Aggies are the teams that are expected to give the Eagle bat tle. Mullowney and Vargus have been doing good work on the mound in the past two weeks and will perhaps do the twirling in these two games.

The batting slump the B. C. sluggers hit in the Holy Cross and Georgetown game was responsible for the Eagle's two defeats. The men who had been killing the ball all season seemed to go blind on the two biggest occasions of the year as in many games they have faced twirlers of no mean calibre and have hit them all.

In the game against St. Michael's College, following the Georgetown contest, the Eagle batsmen knocked out thirteen hits, and ought to be able to keep up this style of hitting for the remainder of the season.

The loss of Ed Phillips to the team has weakened somewhat the B. C. hitting. Phillips suffered a split thumb in the Holy Cross game, but will probably be back in the B. C. batting order for the Princeton contest.

Jimmy Liston has been working behind the plate in Phillip's place, and has filled the bill with credit. Liston's throwing is good, but he is a bit weak at the bat.

Coach Henriksen evidently intends to keep Gus Whelan at second base in Cady's place. Gus is fielding more surely now and his hitting is not below the average.

On June 17, Boston College will close the season at Alumni Field with Holy Cross. From now until that date, Coach Henriksen will devote much time to improving the B. C. batting; for unless the Eagles can do better than they did in the first game with the Purple, another defeat awaits them.

PATTON STOPPED BY B. C.

Patton, the B. C. pitching ace, could not stop the Purple batters, and it is doubtful whether he will make a second start against Holy Cross. Vargus, who pitched six fine innings against Georgetown, may twirl on the seventeenth, as Mullowny's curves are well known to the Worcester outfit.

There is still room for improvement in the B. C. infield, and in the base running of the entire team Darling, Comerford, Wilson and Tommy Phillips show plenty of speed on the bases, but do not take the chances that the Purple players took and turned into runs.

Lively Ball is a Menace Now

How much longer will the major league magnates tolerate the home-run burlesque which is spoiling baseball and driving away sensible fans? No doubt the pitching has improved considerably since last season yet the ridiculous slugging continues.

On Thursday, for instance, fourteen home runs were recorded in big league games, bringing the total up to 226 in six weeks. At this rate, the record of 937 homers made in 1921 will be shattered. Perhaps 1,000 four-baggers will have been lined out when the campaign ends on October 1.

The magnates still insist that the ball isn't "lively," but it is hard to explain the velocity of the cannon shot that nearly killed Pitcher Hubbell of the Phillies.

The other day a high foul ball bounded from the concrete floor of a field box at the Polo Grounds to a spectator sitting in the front row of the upper tier. What is the answer?

OH, HORRORS! HARVARD SECOND BEATS FIRST

Same Old Story in the Same Old Way as Crimson Vainly Tries to Win Fame on Water

The Harvard second varsity crew yesterday afternoon repeated its performance of Friday by pulling away from the first crew in a race over the 1½ miles course.

The second eight stroked by Walter Amory covered the distance in the remarkable time of 9 minutes and 38 seconds, which time has only been bettered once. Cornell swept over the course in 1911 in the record time of 9 minutes, 36 seconds. Amory, who has been pulling the boss oar in the second shell, was stroke in the varsity boat until a short while before the American Henley at which time the present eight gave the junior shells of Pennsylvania and Annapolis a chance to see Coxswain Sherwin Badger's back.

In that race the Harvard boat defeated Coach Wright's powerful Pennsylvania eight that won by a short margin over the Harvard varsity on the Charles at the beginning of the present rowing season.

The Harvard rowing mentors say that there will not be any radical changes in the first varsity, but that Amory may unseat Stan Brown, who is now setting the beat for the first crew.

Yesterday afternoon these two crews lined up at the Cottage Farm bridge at 5 o'clock and when they got away the first crew took the lead of a length. At this time Amory and his brother galley slaves bent to their oars and had pulled even with the first eight a few yards from the finish. The first boat tried to answer this challenge, but the smooth unison of the seconds was too much for them and when the boats flashed between the flags a quarter of a length was the margin in favor of the second boat.

The Lexington Council, No. 54, Knights of Columbus baseball nine will play its first Sunday game, this afternoon, opposing the Winthrop Council, Knights of Columbus team, on the Lexington Athletic Field, at 3 o'clock.

AGAIN

All things return. The fields of May resume last season's green,
The meadows in the month of June take on their olden sheen,
The hills, when Summer days have fled,
Put on their Autumn coat of red,
The moon comes back when night is black to decorate the scene.
All things return. The sun comes back to throw its daily flame,
The tides go out and face about, eternally the same.
And once a year as sure as Fate
A lot of horsemen congregate
And threaten to revive again the grand old racing game.

Ken Williams has a running start in the home run handicap, but Ruth leads him by several columns in the literary race.

This is Ken's first year in the Li'erary League, but he hits the capital "I" every shot.

Hornsby is a loafer, according to his trainer. But he manages to make the rest of them look like bums.

Reports from St. Louis indicate that there is not much kick in the Rickeys these days.

There is likker in Conan Doyle's spirit world. Which explains the reluctance of the spirits to come back to earth.

HEAVENLY HANGOVERS

If Conan's happy spirit land
Is full of mirth and laughter,
I wonder how the spirits stand
The cold gray morning after.

Boston Elevated Preferred and Ventura Oil Reach Record Highs

By LEON E. MERCHANT.

Several new record highs were established at an irregular short session on the Boston Stock Exchange yesterday. Closing out of accounts over the week-end and the uneven trend in New York accounted for the mixed price changes. Trading in several of the strictly home issues was on a good-sized scale.

Boston Elevated preferred occupied a prominent position on the constructive side, a rise of 1¼ points placing the shares at a record top price of 101¼. The common shares receded fractionally. Next Friday West End common and preferred shares will become Boston Elevated first and second preferred stocks.

Ventura Consolidated Oil continued to push higher, the shares mailing a new upper level for 53⅜. Pond Creek Coal jumped a point to 23, while Island Creek Coal added 1⅛ points to 113⅛. Abmeek was up 4 points to 63.

U. S. Smelting common, Calumet & Hecla and Waltham Watch preferred were reactionary.

That little stock selling "under $10.00" that we have advertised here for two weeks past, is strongly entrenched FIVE POINTS higher than the price in the bulletin; the rea. more than 1 ever mentioned.

Once year and a half the Ivy Pool has given its proprietary buyers profits from $40.00 and $5.00. It is still under $10.00. We have no opinion what its failure to "go" indicates, except that the Pool stock program then about $30.00 Pool stock that they must sell at a profit. Pool stocks that have been sold at a profit are going on a safe and sane basis. Call on the stock in its $10 purchase. Then look in the list of those occasional "sure things" that we prove to be a mistake and on short notice bulletin make a fortune on a stock going to be advertised and bulletin that for one hundred dollars "record the stock will advance 30 to 75 points more.

$50.00 will hold the above, $500.00 will hold 1,000 shares, with a margin deposit of $250.00 or $5000.00 on the two purchases.

Real Estate News for the Home-Buyer and Investor

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY CONTINUES

Holiday Week's Business Compares Favorably With Preceding Ones

NOS. 80 TO 82 SUMMER STREET IS SOLD

Sales of Vacant Land Indicative of a Continued Building Activity

Although the holiday interrupted realty activities to some extent the volume of business transacted during the week compared favorably with other weeks in May which rounded out the busiest month in years.

Not an impressive new building announcement was made during the past several days, which by the way, appeared unusual, in fact, of the extraordinary notices that have been appearing in the real estate news columns recently. It is expected, however, that plans will soon be ready for the construction of a new office building on the corner of Beacon and Bowdoin streets, costing about $1,500,000.

The sale of No. 80 to 82 Summer street was the largest transaction reported in the down-town district. The total valuation of the properties involved was nearly $400,000.

Conveyances of suburban properties continue at a high level. Aside from the fact that suburban brokers are passing through the most effective Spring season in years, the most encouraging feature extracted from the situation is that there is a large amount of vacant land that is being sold. In most every instance the purchaser plans to build either a new home, an apartment building or a mercantile structure, which indicates that there is no apparent intention to lease building operations throughout Greater Boston.

Following are the more important of the week's transactions:

MANY LOTS SOLD AT CHARLEMONT

The pleasant weather of the past week brought a great many purchasers to the above tract, and a number of lots were sold for immediate improvement. Charlemont is situated in Newton Highlands, with a large frontage on Hammond street, adjoining the land of the Charles River Country Club. The tract comprises 105 acres, over half of which has already been sold. The streets are built to approved grades, many bungalows are already erected and more in process of construction.

Charlemont is within easy walking distance of the Newton and Worcester car line, and of the Newton Highlands Station and Newton Upper Falls Station.

This tract is being developed by Neil McIntosh, trustee, Old South building, who has placed suitable restrictions on the property to insure this section to grow into a first class residential section.

Mr. McIntosh reports the following sales made during the past week: Lots No. 218, 219 and 220 to Alfred J. Gilmore, 27 Ivy street, Boston; Lot No. 188 to John P. BREAK BUILDING RECORDS AT HAMPTON BEACH

HAMPTON BEACH OPENS SEASON

After Active Winter of Building Awaits Vacationists in New Attire

Hampton Beach—Newly attired and more attractive than ever after its disasterous fire of last year—is now in readiness for the summer season of 1922.

Merchants, resort owners and summer residents have spent an expedited Winter and Spring in rebuilding the burned area and preparations are now completed for a banner season. In addition to the construction of several new hotels replacing those destroyed last year more than one hundred and fifty new cottages have been erected. Building during the past twelve months has been the largest in the history of Hampton Beach.

All of the new hotel and apartment buildings are of modern fireproof construction embodying up-to-date improvements and conveniences. In order to keep pace in appearances and attractiveness with the new hotels the owners of the buildings which were not razed by the fire were not slow to realize the necessity of alternations and improvements for their guests and large sums were invested in this work.

The enlargement of Casino Ballroom was one of the most notable improvements among the pleasure resort structures. General R. E. Graves of the Graves and Randall Co., owners of the entire Hampton Beach Casino and Ocean Hotel properties opened this magnificently equipped ballroom last Saturday evening. Those who attended the opening dance were delighted with the new attractions and improvements. A new floor has been installed and verandas have been extended and new seats provided for the comfort and use of the public. Experts in lighting effects spent much time in devising the system which has now been completely installed in the hall and the changes in coloring and brilliancy produced by the acknowledged generosity of Manager Phillip McGeever, the Sanitonian Orchestra has been secured for the Summer.

F. E. Nason, popular manager of the Casino, is another familiar figure who will entertain the vast number of pleasure seekers that visit this popular resort each season.

One of the most attractive of the new hotels erected during the past Winter is "The Garland," of which James W. Garland, Jr., is owner and manager. BUILDING BOOM AT NANTASKET

Several New Hotels, Amusement Places and Cottages Erected

That building operations are not confined to commercial and residential real estate around Boston is evident by the amount of new construction completed at Nantasket Beach since last Summer.

Several new hotels, hundreds of cottages and a number of new amusement structures are Nantasket Beach's contribution to the building program of this season. The popularity of this famous beach is well known to the business men and property owners and preparations for the Summer were made accordingly. Accommodations for Summer residents and visitors this year are better than ever.

Nantasket Beach appeals strongly to Bostonians as a Summer residence. Its accessibility to the hub by boat, electric cars or automobile is in no small measure responsible for its popularity. This is further enhanced by its long stretch of fine sandy beach with extraordinary bathing facilities, its cool atmosphere and pleasant environment.

Thousands of people visit Nantasket afternoons and evenings throughout the Summer months providing the hotels and amusement owners with a patronage beyond that of the average Summer resort. New hotels have been built to meet the requirements among which is the New Pacific Hotel, a new four-story structure of twenty-five rooms. Proprietor Bornstein has already opened the hotel for the Summer. It is located on Centre Hill. Special provisions are made for dancing parties.

Another new structure erected during the Winter is the Sagamore Bath containing stores and apartments and 225 lockers with accommodations for 2 000 swimmers. This structure is situated on Surf Side. Adjoining the Sagamore is a new dance hall now under construction. It will be completed about the first of July. Other new amusement buildings have been erected during the Winter.

Hundreds of new cottages have been built since last Summer, extending from Nantasket to Pemberton. In Allerton, ex-Commissioner of Buildings F. A. Ahearn has under way twelve cottages. About a dozen new dwellings have been completed since Winter at Kenberma Park, which is located just off Nantasket avenue.

Rockaway Park is another new development in the centre of an extensive building program. This is one of the most attractive seashore developments in recent years. The demand for house lots has been extraordinarily large, and purchasers invariably commence the erection of cottage homes. Desirable land is selling rapidly in all sections of Nantasket and very little of it remains undeveloped. It is estimated that more than 150 cottages have been completed this season.

Attention has also been given to the roads and this section of Massachusetts can boast of the best automobile thoroughfares in the State.

SPECIAL TOURS TO CANADIAN POINTS

On account of the large demand of tourists for a trip to Montreal, St. Lawrence River, Quebec and Ste. Anne de Beaupre, there have been special tours arranged to leave Boston during July, August and September covering this territory, leaving on a Monday, returning on a Saturday.

The trip includes all expenses, hotels, staterooms, side trips, etc., and there will be in charge of this trip a personal representative of the Colpitts Tourist Company, No. 281 Washington street, Boston, who will personally look after the party, instilling it pleasant and convenient for everybody.

This is an unexcelled opportunity for zealous patrons of Ste. Anne to visit her shrine, famous the world over for its miraculous cures. However, the shrine and its relics are not the only attractions, for here also are priceless paintings, monuments of rare marble, and gifts donated by royalty, while members of the party will be conducted through the churches, monasteries and other equally interesting places by church authorities, who will take charge of the party at Quebec, and arrange for special meals.

Literature pertaining to Ste. Anne and Itineraries of this trip may be had by applying to the office above named. Also attractive literature pertaining to Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Nova Scotia, etc.

BERMUDA TOURS ARE POPULAR

Vacationists Appreciate Attractions of Trip to Famous Resort

When it is realized that the charming Bermuda Islands are only two days distant from New York and, because of their unique geographical position, are free from the heat of the tropics, vacationists are quick to appreciate that the loveliest Summer tours offer unequaled opportunities to visit a quaint, foreign land at the cost of a mountain or seashore trip.

The glorious out-of-doors appeals to tourists in Bermuda as never before, and with a remarkable variety of sports and attractions from which to choose, one may spend many months on the Islands without exhausting the possibilities for pleasurable recreation and entertainment. Water sports of all kinds—bathing, sailing, rowing, canoeing, motor-boating and fishing—form the chief diversions in this field of sport. Bermuda's opal-tinted waters, with their coral beaches and redrock-ribbed hillsides ashore with flowers form panoramic vistas of loveliness which add to the enjoyment of what ever form of water sport in which one may indulge. The amazing clearness of the water in and around Bermuda is truly remarkable. Every "spot" a penny in thirty feet of water on the white coral bottoms of the bays and harbors.

The innumerable bays, harbors and inlets among the hundred-odd islands offer a wide choice for sailing, rowing or canoeing, while the many bathing beaches where crystal clear water and the novelty of soft white coral sand may be enjoyed gives one a new thrill in this popular recreation. For those who prefer salt water bathing, there are excellent harbor floats and tiled bathing pools.

Land sports are not by any means ignored in Bermuda. Two unsurpassed 18-hole golf courses have been added to the Vice-Regal's 9-hole courses and it may be safely stated that in promotion to her six Summits, Bermuda has more golf courses than any other country in the world. Excellent tennis courts, both covered and turf, will be found in Bermuda at all the larger hotels; while government courts may be rented at a nominal fee.

As there are no trains, trolley cars or automobile in Bermuda, transportation is principally by means of boats, carriages and bicycles. Ferries run between important points and there are carriages for driving, boats, carriages for driving or horses for riding may be secured. Bicycles may be rented by the hour, day or week, by those who prefer the delights of riding along Bermuda's wonderful, winding roadways. Good roads, bordered miles of white coral roadways wind their way through a veritable fairyland of loveliness, in which the opal-tinted waters, gorgeous blossoms and charming white coral cottages lend their attractions in forming scenes of enchantment.

NATURAL MARVELS.

Not the least of the visitors' delights will be in witnessing Bermuda's wonderful natural marvels—the crystal caves. Many feet below the surface of the surrounding country lie the in the Walsingham section of Bermuda these beautiful creations of crystal calcite are located. Practically all the caves are electrically lighted, which lends additional enchantment to scenes which surpass the Arabian Nights in their beauty and splendor. Lacelike pendants of glittering stalactites hang suspended from the walls of the grottos, while fairy pools with their mirror-like surfaces rise from the floors. Pools of crystal-clear waters reflect the beauties of the caves, while the blended lights entrances the beholder. Scientists have estimated that Bermuda's crystal caves have been many thousands of years in reaching their present state of development.

A visit to the coral reefs, where the tourist may gaze through a glass-bottomed boat at the weirdly beautiful sea-gardens is also in order. Here may be seen many strange plants of the sea, including sea-fans, sea-eggs and puddings, brainstones, delicate anemones and many other of the sea-gardens' peculiar vegetation.

The Furness Bermuda Line of New York, under contract with the Bermuda government, operates two magnificent new twin-screw steamships, the Fort St. George and the Fort St. George, on the New York Bermuda route, on an all-year-round express service basis. Throughout the entire Winter period sailings are made twice weekly. This twice-weekly service has been recently extended to include the months of August, September and October as well. During the balance of the year, sailings are made every five days. Special Summer vacation tours, which include all expenses for steamer, hotel and side trips are conducted throughout the entire Summer season period from June to November, inclusive. Eight-day tours, including all expenses, cost $43—nine days $48.50 and up, depending upon choice of stateroom on steamer. Longer tours at proportionately low rates are also offered. Descriptive literature giving all details of Bermuda vacation trips may be procured from the Furness Bermuda Line, No. 34 Whitehall street, New York city, or from any Tourist Agent.

BIG FURNITURE EXHIBIT NEAR

With all the furniture industries speeding up production and with consumer demand well beyond the normal mark, it is a most timely thought to hold what is perhaps the first Boston show of its kind "made in New England" Furniture Show, which will be held in Mechanics building, June 12 to 17.

Boston should never be forgotten by the furniture makers; its position is unique, for it is truly the original home of the vast furniture industry.

Year by year the furniture manufacturing trades of all sorts have strengthened their positions here in New England until today they stand forth most prominently as leaders.

Boston is an ideal location for the coming exhibition. As capital of the State it houses many of the important buyers in the trade. It is handy for the tourists coming from all over New England, and as the Boston Furniture Show will be held June 12 to 17 (at Mechanics building) there naturally will be scores on hand for old fashioned New England clambake. This, with the prospect of a moonlight sail over Boston Harbor will form part of the afternoon of interested visitors who will come for business and recreation.

The Boston Furniture Show lasts but for one week, and Manager Alfred L. DeNoyer has outlined many forms of entertainment for his guests. For instance, it is contemplated to take the buyers and their friends to Nantasket where all will business recreation. The many beach and other Summer resorts will be in full swing just at the time of the show—June 12 to 17—and every visiting buyer can take his choice of city or beach hotel accommodation —through arrangement with Mr. DeNoyer.

The Bore---Terrible Creature

Copyright, 1922, International Feature Service, Inc.—Registered U. S. Patent Office.

We Can't All Do What We Want to Do in This Life. When Your Son Starts Out for Himself, There Is No Use Saying "Be President of the United States, Be a General in the Army, Be a Multimillionaire." But You CAN Say to Him, with Reason and Hope, "Whatever Else You Do, or Are, in the Name of Common Sense, DON'T Be a Bore."

There Are Ten Thousand Kinds of Bores Among Human Beings, and Each One, in His Own Particular Way, Is Worse Than All the Others.

There Is One Very Simple Way to Avoid Being a Bore. The Recipe Is: STOP TALKING AND LISTEN.

Send This Editorial to Somebody That Needs It, Preferably to Somebody Still YOUNG. It Is Hard for the Old to Change.

AS the famous English wit Sidney Smith was walking toward his club a bore, seizing him by the buttonhole, asked, "What's going on?"

"I am," replied Smith, and went on as rapidly as he could.

It was a good answer. You may use it some time when a fearful bore comes in sight. But you can't use it always.

What is more dreadful than to sit at a luncheon table, in a railroad car, in your own house, or in another man's house, held by that calamity the bore that does not know he is a bore and that thinks himself interesting?

Arthur Young, who makes this cartoon, suggests that Sunday editorials should occasionally describe the so-called minor evils and troubles, not always what he calls "the highbrow high spots."

He is right, and he presents his cartoon bore ingeniously, with the tail, foot and wings of Satan and the head of a parrot, making noise for the sake of noise.

* * *

What is a bore? He is a well-meaning creature that likes the sound of his own voice, and foolishly imagines that others also like it.

He is a self-centred being, foolish enough to believe that everything affecting himself, from the symptoms of his latest cold to the phenomenal wisdom of his youngest child, will interest all others as he is interested.

He is an unfortunate human being to whom father, mother, brother, sister and friends have not told the truth about himself.

* * *

One kind of bore a little worse than the bore that talks about himself is the bore that insists upon talking too much about and to the person he is addressing.

To meet a man and ask him endless, aimless questions about himself, with a foolish idea that you are interesting him, is at least as bad as meeting that same man and making him listen for an hour or more to worthless details about yourself and your own affairs.

* * *

Young man, don't be a bore. You will avoid the risk if you remember that nobody ever lost an opportunity in life by LISTENING.

What YOU have to say YOU KNOW ALREADY; you can't learn anything by hearing yourself talk. Why insist on throwing out into the air, merely to hear it, what you already know?

The talk of the bore is like bouncing a rubber ball against the wall and catching it. All very well for children in the way of physical exercise; bad for adults the way of mental exercise.

* * *

A good salesman says just enough, in just the right way, to make his point clear and talk the CUSTOMER into a sale.

The salesman with the curse of boredom in his brain first talks the customer into a sale, then talks HIMSELF out of the sale.

Why do men hang up on their offices the sign, "Three Miles Is Long Enough for Any Conversation"?

It is because they fear the bore who sits down, spreads himself out, says, 'I won't keep you a minute," and then keeps you until your assistant, warned by experience, comes to tell you "Those gentlemen are waiting for you."

Why is the man, employer of many important workers, a tiresome man with a furrowed face?

It is because HE is tired of listening. It is because he must hear not only what his men have actually DONE but what he WANTS to hear, but because he must also hear the long-winded stories about themselves, their wonderful accomplishments, and the shortcomings of their associates.

If the worker trying to rise knew enough to tell his employer what interests THE EMPLOYER, and knew enough to keep his mouth shut about the innumerable and unimportant things that interest HIMSELF, he would discover himself going up in business faster.

* * *

Don't bore your friends. Don't bore your wife. That last advice is especially important.

Many a poor woman is faded, worn out, when she ought to be in her prime, because she has spent evening after evening listening to the dull talk of a dull husband.

When you come home, talk to your wife about HERSELF—what she has done, what difficulty she has met, what SHE is planning.

At first she will think you have gone crazy, but when she realizes the blessed truth she will grow younger rapidly.

* * *

How many kinds of bores are there?

Ask how many kinds of leaves there are in the forest, how many pebbles of different shapes on the shores of the sea.

There is the bore that always agrees with you, hoping that you will stop talking that he may have a chance to begin.

There is the bore that always DISAGREES with you, merely to hear himself talk on the other side.

There is the fearful bore that brags, and the other bore that bothers you with his humility, his modesty, usually pretended, his affectation of admiration for you and your "wonderful qualities."

* * *

When you look at a rainbow, Niagara Falls, the beautiful clouds or the flashing lightning you LOOK at those things and keep quiet. You don't say to the rainbow:

"Let me tell you a little story about my Johnny." You don't say to the roaring thunder, "When I was on the other side of the water I heard an explosion that would surprise you. Let me tell you about it."

And you don't tell Niagara Falls, leaping down the cliff, how fast YOU can go downstairs.

Treat other human beings, your fellows, as you treat lightning, the rainbow and the Falls of Niagara. Look at them, listen to them, FORGET YOURSELF FOR A MOMENT, IF YOU POSSIBLY CAN.

With his cartoon, which we gladly publish, Mr. Young sends this comment on his own work:

"The common variety of bore is one who talks unceasingly about trivialities until you have had enough. The bore continues talking, however, not knowing, or, if he does know, not caring about your bored feeling.

"With the problem of living uppermost, one cannot expect people to be much interested in profound subjects. Walk up any street of any city and catch snatches of conversation and you will find that most of them relate to deals, profits and jobs.

"But there is a type of bore who hasn't the tact to know that this all-engrossing subject is not popular with some people all of the time.

"Another type is the man who travels and insists on telling you what train he took, where he changed cars, when he arrived, and all of the other details of his important journey.

"The leading lady in a popular play speaks this line: 'It's a good thing there is weather, or George wouldn't have anything to talk about.'

"One who forces heavy subjects on a group of people in no mood or incapable of hard thinking may also be classed as a bore, the type obsessed with his own wisdom.

"Rather than talk just to make conversation, isn't it better to remain silent? Is there any good reason for speaking at all unless you can throw light on the subject under discussion?

"In drawing my cartoon I thought it truthful portraiture to make the bore part parrot and part fiend—a composite simile that may help scientists to study and catalogue him."—ART YOUNG.

One Thousand Girls to Meet at Vassar

MORE than one thousand girls, three hundred and fifty of them from Massachusetts, are to attend the twelfth biennial convention of the National League of Girls' Clubs at Vassar College, June 15 to June 18. The Massachusetts delegation, headed by Miss Mildred Gutterson, executive secretary for the State, leaves Boston by boat for New York June 13. The following day there will be a sight-seeing trip around New York followed by a trip up the Hudson and then Vassar!

The Vassar students, alumnae and faculty are interested in this convention of girls from factories, offices and stores. Girls of every faith and occupation from many different States, will meet together to plan their own programs, elect their own officers, and shape the policies of their own organization. Every two years the league holds such a national convention to which delegates from the various girls' clubs are sent to elect national officers.

There is a special fitness in Vassar's entertainment because twenty years ago Miss Jean Hamilton, the general secretary, graduated from that college and Mrs. Bernard M. Pollak of New York is another alumnae.

The convention program includes fun and study. A valuable part of it will be the Round Table discussions on practical problems of democratic club life and on the wider topics of citizenship and unemployment. One afternoon will be devoted to a big interlaege field meet. Mrs. Pollak has presented a cup for this event.

Thirty Vassar girls are staying on at the college to act as hostesses for the visitors and to initiate those who wish in some of the Vassar ceremonies such as a hoop rolling on the campus, the tree ceremonies and lantern parade. There is to be an historical pageant in the outdoor theatre on Friday evening. It was written for this occasion by Miss Mary Conger Vanamee, secretary of the national league.

The convention will close Sunday afternoon with services in the chapel.

Where Does Your Husband Live

A BOSTON clubwoman recently pointed out to the members of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs and League of Women Voters that in Massachusetts a woman whose husband establishes residence at a club, loses her citizenship. Her only recourse under existing laws, it has been brought out, is to go and live with him.

Appearing before the Secretary of State and the Attorney-General of Massachusetts not long ago was a delegation of women who asserted that several of their sex had been refused the ballot because the legal residence of their husbands was at a Boston club.

Other cases cited included that of a Brookline woman who did not know the whereabouts of her husband and who because of this was refused registration. Another woman who was separated from her husband was informed that she was "not divorced enough" to maintain a separate residence and so could not vote.

Clubwomen are co-operating with the league and other women's organizations for the repeal of such laws.

As the Widow Sees Them

By FLORENCE COWLES

MANY people write and tell me that they are lonely. Young and old, men and women, all are lonely. Lonely. It seems terrible that there should be so much loneliness in the world, especially in the cities where men and women and children are herded together and where one often gasps and prays for a surcease from noise and confusion and longs for green grass and sunshine and great open places where there is no one! At least I do.

Somehow, I can't imagine loneliness. It seems to me everyone is so friendly. The conductor has a smile for me when I board the car in the morning, so has the clerk who fits my gloves, and the little waitress at luncheon will always stop for a few words if I indicate I have the time. There are people on the street who ask directions, the boys who do my shoes talk to me; strangers in the subway turn to me in their bewilderment. There is the woman with the baby on the car who gladly accepts a helping hand and then tells me all about everything. There is the elevator man whose wife has just died and the janitor who is having trouble with the milkman because he brings in mud on the back stairs. And there is the 'phone!

Everyone is friendly. Everyone is smiling and when I get those letters telling me how cold the world is, how self-centered everyone is and how unutterably lonely the writer is I KNOW where the fault lies! It lies with you yourself! You close the doors to the friendliness of the world and you demand that individuals seek you out, use a jimmy on the doors of your soul and discover you cowering behind.

Well, they won't do it! So unlock the doors and come out into the sunshine and discover for yourself how really nice the old world is after all!

Thirteen Club Joins Federation

UNIQUE in brevity was the pre sentation speech to the State Federation of Women's Clubs of Miss Marion Howard Brazier, founder of the Thirteen Club of Boston. She was introduced by a member, Mrs. George Minot Parker, the outgoing president of the federation, who spoke of her work as an organizer of more than ten clubs and patriotic societies in the State.

Miss Brazier in thirteen words said: "Born, organized, launched in March. Has creed, objects, limited membership. Promises to serve." There was the whole story, as the club is too young to have achieved much.

It plans for several large affairs the coming season, opening Friday, October 13, with an evening meeting, followed by some form of entertainment with professional talent.

Miss Brazier had organized the following: Massachusetts D. A. R., Founders' Society, Ex-Regents D. A. R. Club, the Professional Women's Club, Boston, Parliamentary Law and the Film Clubs, besides being a charter member of several like the Presidents' Club, to which she was recently elected vice-president.

She is also a member of the London Lyceum Club, the Alpha Society (New York), honorary member of the Boston Proofreaders' Society, has founded three D. A. R. chapters, Bunker Hill Paul Jones and John Paul Jones, and is charter member of Paul Revere Chapter, D. A. R.

News of State League of Voters

THE second annual convention of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, which has just closed its sessions, was marked by an optimistic and enthusiastic belief in the value of the work done by this organization during the two years of its life, and with an equally strong confidence that it will carry on an even greater work in education for citizenship and an intelligent participation in government during the year to come.

Many changes were brought about by the election, the presidents, Mrs. George R. Fearing, and the first clerk, Mrs. George W. Perkins, retiring from the positions they have so well filled during the two years of their service. The new board of officers elected is as follows: President, Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch; first vice-president, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney; second vice-president, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins; treasurer, Mrs. Louis K. Snyder; clerk, Mrs. Joseph A. McCord; directors at large, Miss Mabel Gillespie, Mrs. Augustus Hemenway, Mrs. Thomas H. Logan; directors, second region, Mrs. Clara M. Folger of Brockton; third region, Mrs. Charles W. McDermott of Brookline; fourth region, Mrs. Mary Livermore Barrows of Melrose; fifth region, Miss Florence H. Luscomb of Boston; sixth region, Mrs. Charles H. Masury of Danvers; seventh region, Mrs. Samuel B. Woodward of Worcester; eighth region, Mrs. James Van Sickle of Springfield; ninth region, Mrs. Gertrude C. Smith of Deerfield.

Mrs. Rotch has been connected with the league first as legislative chairman and during the past year as a vice-president. She is also the able editor of The Beacon, the legislative bulletin published by the league. In all of which she has become well known throughout the State as an authority in legislation and legislative procedure.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney has been president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs for three years. During her official life she became widely known to the women of the Commonwealth, and remained a leader among the women speakers of the country. Since her retirement she has been active in State's work for aliens, working with the State Director of Americanization, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer.

The second vice-president, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins, is now president of the Women's City Club of Boston, having been recently re-elected to that office for the third time.

Mrs. Louis K. Snyder is president of Winchester, prominent in the local league. She has been heretofore active in the state league.

Women to Extend Their Privileges to the Men

A SERIES of conferences is being arranged by the Boston League of Women Voters for the purpose of studying the various legislative proposals affecting the status of women. The first meeting will be held on the evening of Wednesday at the law office of Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, chairman of the league's committee on universal laws concerning women.

Measures which were introduced into the present Legislature, especially that of the Woman's Party, make radical revisions in the entire civil status of women, as they deal with such matters as equal pay for equal work, jury service, property rights, marriage and divorce laws, and sex offences.

In a number of instances the women are proposing to extend to men privileges now granted only to themselves. It is planned that a special State commission will be created to study all these measures and report to the next Legislature next January.

Arlington Study Club

Mrs. J. Herbert Mead was elected president of the Arlington Heights Study Club, at its annual meeting, succeeding Mrs. Richard S. Hall. Other officials elected are: First vice-president, Mrs. Herbert A. Snow; second vice-president, Mrs. Henrietta Alden; recording secretary, Mrs. George R. Humphrey; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Herbert R. Peirce; treasurer, Mrs. George H. Lloyd; auditor, Mrs. C. F. Stott; chairman of the hospitality committee Mrs. J. H. News of Interest To Society—by Mrs. C. H. Washburn

SUBURBAN SEASON OPENS

By Mrs. C. H. Washburn

THE Tuesday holiday served to open the suburban sporting schedule most auspiciously, with just the right atmosphere of sunshine and air to make the local al fresco program a joy for all participants and onlookers. With Memorial Day's advent came the first considerable exodus from town which June, coming in on Thursday, followed up with a general closing of houses and apartments for a season which grows longer each year, as the Autumn months are now very generally included. The North Shore colony has already a larger showing than in former years, that at Newport will open in another week, and through the Berkshires there are daily arrivals at cottages and hostelries.

With all this movement comes in another most interesting direction the procession of brides, more notable in numbers and distinction than for years past, and which, with the last announcements, bids to keep right up to July first, with Saturday for the favorite date.

To turn to the holiday program, the magnet for the large sporting contingent of society centred around the Chestnut Hill horse show, and never in former years had that wonderfully beautiful natural environment been the background of such a gathering of older and younger members and their guests.

In New York on the same day the meet at Belmont Park drew the fullest crowd of a similar clientele. The largest luncheon was given by the Richard T. Wilsons. They had forty guests placed at several tables on the veranda and afterwards the company filled several boxes in the Turf and Field Club inclosure. Another of the smart luncheons served on the lawn of the club was that given by Dr. and Mrs. Hamilton Rice, recently returned from India. The Vanderbilts also entertained, and the Payne Whitneys, always an exceptionally brilliant showing of that leading racing contingent.

To turn back to the town, in the lingering events before it puts on its Summer garb of incongruous dessetude, came as a fitting close, the Union Club's May's last day and the opening June one, for which Miss Nichols gave the use of her spacious town house on Chestnut street, and in which those especially interested were Mesdames George R. Agassiz, Horace Binney, Horatio Lamb, John L. Gardner, F. S. Whitwell and Arthur Winslow, the presentation of the three in aid of the Simmons College Endowment Fund. On Tuesday of this week at the Selwyn Theatre in the afternoon comes the Hindu play in aid of Five Children of France, the entertainment sponsored by Mesdames Henry L. Higginson, J. Templeman Coolidge, with Edward W. Forbes and John S. Sargent, the artist, among others.

Across the sea the interest for visiting Americans was the opening of the London season on Monday, and there were many New York and Boston arrivals from the Continent for that always great event. King George held his first levee at Buckingham Palace on that day, with all the pomp and ceremony of times before the war. The King and Queen later attended the matinee by the Comedie Francaise company, one of the biggest fashionable functions of that opening day. Wednesday, Derby Day, brought an enormous company, with many Americans, to Epsom Downs to watch the great race for the blue ribbon of the turf, when the King and Queen, Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles were in the royal box. All the great houses in the vicinity of Epsom gave special luncheons and dinners for these race days. Yesterday the general public had a chance to see the grouping of the colors in honor of the King's birthday at the Horse Guards' parade, with the King and Queen and all the members of the family in full array.

Miss Aldrich Bride of Yesterday

TRINITY Church was simply but effectively decorated for the wedding yesterday at twelve-thirty of Miss Lilian Aldrich and John Gordon Winchester, the Rev. Dr. Mann officiating. Ward roses with ferns and palms were used also some bridal wreath which had been brought from the country home in Dublin, N. H. The bride, who is tall, slender and handsome was lovely in her gown of ivory satin veiled in old lace worn by her maternal grandmother, the veil of lace and tulle fastened with orange blossoms and covering the unusually long train.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Robert Porter Patterson (Margaret Winchester) of New York, the sister of the bridegroom, was in deep peach colored corded crepe, the long tight-fitting bodice showing a bateau neck outlined in organdy, and the full skirt long on the sides. The horsehair hat of the same color was veiled in tulle and banked with flowers at one side.

The bridesmaids, Miss Mabel Brenner, Miss Linda Wellington and Miss Eleanore Wetmore, sister debutantes of Miss Aldrich, and member with her of the 1920 Sewing Circle, and Miss Pauline Cabot, who came out the following year, also Miss Elizabeth Lee Dodge, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray W. Dodge; and Miss Susan Sage, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dean Sage, both families of Park avenue, New York; Miss Mary Enson of Hartford, and Miss Caroline Parker, the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Amasa J. Parker, Jr., of Albany, New York, were dressed the same as Mrs. Patterson, excepting the coloring, which was of a paler peach tint.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the home of Mrs. Charles Frost Aldrich on Beacon street, the young people standing in front of a rare old satin tapestry of the same coppery peach coloring as the attendants' gowns, and the Ward roses which were used. Also of the receiving party were Mrs. Aldrich, who wore a rich gown of cream lace and a brown hat, and Mrs. Tarleton Winchester, the bridegroom's mother, distinguished in brown and peacock georgette and a hat of the same coloring. Mr. and Mrs. Winchester, upon their return from the honeymoon, will make their home at Scarsdale, N. Y.

Notable Engagement Announced

THE engagement which comes from London of Miss Rosamond Fay and Captain Henry B. Montagu makes an interest for a large family connection here. Miss Fay is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Dudley Bowditch Fay of Beacon street and a granddaughter of Mrs. Gardiner Greene Hammond, which brings in a prominent Bowditch and Forbes group. On the maternal side, Miss Fay is a niece of Mrs. George S. Silsbee, Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. M. G. Lockwood, and Francis and Miss Mary and Viscount Lascelles were in the royal box. All the great houses in the vicinity of Epsom gave special luncheons and dinners for these race days. Yesterday the general public had a chance to see the grouping of the colors in honor of the King's birthday at the Horse Guards' parade, with the King and Queen and all the members of the family in full array.

Miss Zerrahn of Week's Brides

MISS ELIZABETH ZERRAHN, whose wedding to Theodore Chadwick took place yesterday afternoon at the church of the Holy Spirit in Mattapan, made a handsome bride in her beautiful gown of white lace and old point with a veil of rare old lace which had been worn by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Whitney (born Lawrence), by her daughters, Mrs. Zerrahn and Mrs. James Jackson Minot, and in the third generation by Mrs. Charles Burnet Bradley (Constance Zerrahn). Of the lace on the gown, part of it coming down from the Lawrence family, was worn at the last ball Napoleon gave at the Tuileries, and other lace was the wedding gift of Prince and Princess Cantacuzene (Clarissa Curtis), which was brought by the former's grandmother when she escaped to Paris from Russia. The bouquet was of valley lilies Miss Frances Fairchild of New York, the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, the Misses Sybil Appleton and Miriam Frano, sister debutantes of Miss Zerrahn, and with Miss Fairchild all members of the 1918 Sewing Circle, Miss Elsie Nichols, president of the Vincent Club, who came out the year before, and Miss Ellen Whitney, a cousin of Miss Zerrahn, were dressed alike in lovely gowns of French blue georgette over salmon colored silk. The Leghorn hats had crowns of French blue velvet with clusters of flowers on one side and the bouquets were of blue larkspur and pink butterfly roses.

Mrs Zerrahn was in sand-colored satin crepe and hat of the same coloring with blue-mauve hydrangeas Also in the family group were Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Bradley (Constance Zerrahn) and their children, who arrived unexpectedly from their present home in Europe and are spending the week-end with the Zerrahns Mrs. Chadwick, the mother of the bridegroom, was in white crepe and a black hat with plumes.

Bishop Lawrence, a relative of the bride, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Mr. Taylor, the rector. Wallace Goodrich played the organ. Following the ceremony, which was confined to the relatives and more intimate friends, there was a large and brilliant reception at the Zerrahn home in Milton.

Miss Storey of Week's Brides

Trinity Church was simply but effectively decorated with candles, pottery and a few pots blooms for the marriage Thursday afternoon of Miss Katharine Lane Storey and Theodore Lyman Storey, the bride, who is tall and dark, looked unusually well in her gown of white satin, all but the front of the bodice covered with old family lace, garlanded with orange blossoms, which also held the lace veil in place. The only ornament was a long rope of fine pearls and the bouquet was of valley lilies and white orchids.

Miss Miriam Ladd, who was her cousin's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, the Misses Sara Apthorp, Louisa Baxeley, Gertrude Sturgis and Elizabeth Clark, were dressed alike in watermelon pink georgette with pale pink chiffon the large hats entirely of the darker material with drapery falling over one shoulder. They carried clusters of Spring flowers tied with large bows of pale green and gold gauze ribbon.

Mrs. Richard C. Storey, the mother of the bride, was in silver gray chiffon covered with embroidered tulle and a large plumed hat of the same delicate coloring. The jewels were a string of pearls and a pearl ornament and a corsage bouquet of mauve orchids was worn. Of the bride's maternal relatives were her grandfather, Mr. William J. Ladd, and her aunts, Mrs. Frederick Hodman Weld and Mrs. John W. Hallowell with Mr. Hallowell and their children Mrs. Weld wore dark blue chiffon over fuschia-colored crepe with beaded embroidery and a blue plumed hat; Mrs. Hallowell in pheasant crepe with a large hat to match, and her little daughter peach-colored organdie and a leghorn hat.

Of the bride's paternal relatives were her grandfather, Mr. Moorfield Storey who, by the way, is of the same Harvard '66 class as the bridegroom's father, and his aunts, Mrs. Robert M. Saltonstall and Mrs. Edward W. Hooper with their children. Mrs. Saltonstall in dark blue georgette with a large black hat, Mrs. Hooper in pale blue organdy and a leghorn hat with blue and brown flowers

The Spectator Talks on The Russian Church

ONE of the most remarkable features of the Russian revolution is the collapse of the Russian church.

It furnishes a good example of how a great and noble impulse can be almost extinguished by those arch enemies of life, authority and organization.

In order to gain power the church in Russia, as elsewhere, early identified itself with the government. It took over the principle of autocracy.

This, of course, pleased the government, because it strengthened its hold on the people, and pleased the priesthood because it gave them prominence and power.

The result, however, was fatal. Even before the revolution the influence over and contact with the people which the church formerly had was enfeebled and almost lost.

During the war the church entirely failed to administer spiritual comfort and inspiration to its subjects. Denekin in his memoirs of the war and revolution complains bitterly of the declining influence of the church, and goes so far as to express his belief that this decline was one of the causes of Russia's defeat.

During the war the church entirely failed to administer spiritual comfort and inspiration to its subjects. Denekin in his memoirs of the war and revolution complains bitterly of the declining influence of the church, and goes so far as to express his belief that this decline was one of the causes of Russia's defeat.

When the Czar was deposed, it was a blow to the church, which had identified itself with autocracy. When the revolution came along, when the Bolsheviks rose to power, the church was passive and hesitating. It came out after a while with a welcome to the revolution and a blessing on the provisional government. But this failed to win favor and only increased its reputation for a lack of sincerity.

The Bolsheviks rudely disestablished the church and began a violent propaganda against all religion, which in their mind by years of training had been identified with autocracy.

The estates belonging to the Church and monasteries were seized. The sacred remains of the saints, which the priests claim never decay, were dug up by order of the Soviets and it was found that they did not decay simply because they were cunningly stuffed with sawdust and cotton. When the famine came the Church did not have sufficient power or spirit to grasp the opportunity. The Patriarch sent out appeals to the world for aid to the famine stricken, and the offers collected some money, but that was all. The Bolsheviks kept the relief funds in their own hands. The Church failed to realize that when they did not measure up to such a great and obvious duty to humanity as the relief of millions of starving people, they were morally done for.

The Bolsheviks pressed their advantage and published a decree confiscating the Church's wealth, as usual, the Church hesitated, undecided what action to take. Some advocated a voluntary surrender and others insisted upon refusal.

The Patriarch finally advised the Church to give up those ornaments which were superfluous, but to keep those used in the service. As the former were of little value and the latter were of great value, this advice was greeted with Bolshevik derision

EXPERIENCE

Edited by EMILY ATKINS

WOMEN worry about having nothing to wear, reformers about their wearing it!

Clothes are indicative of a person's attitude towards life. A cynical man argues this way, "A woman is just what she wears. Female clothes are an index to the female mind. A girl's mind works as her clothes look. You can tell 'em as far as yuh can see 'em."

Ever think of that, little girl, when you begin to doll up? Many of you write and ask me why men don't treat YOU with respect. I wonder whether your clothes don't kill the respect a man might have for you if you were dressed differently.

I am not advocating hooped-shirts and pantalettes, nor bustles and old iron-sides. BUT I do think every woman should wear clothes which suit HER type, and not wear clothes just to be in what she considers style. To be stylish is to be attractively individual. It doesn't mean that all women should wear the same style of gown cut on the same pattern. What suits one woman doesn't suit another.

We are supposed to have freedom of thought. Why not exercise it in the choosing of our clothes?

EMILY ATKINS

Girls, Mind Your Manners!

Dear Miss Atkins:

THE other night I met a very pretty girl. I invited her to go to a show. Before she went she introduced me to her mother. Coping home I didn't say much she started telling me about herself. She was still talking when we reached home. When I left her she said good night, but didn't thank me for taking her out. I like the girl very much, but am wondering if I should follow up the acquaintance.

Was it my fault?

The trouble is these days one doesn't know how to treat girls. Some expect one thing and others another. I can say I wouldn't have treated my sister any better than I treated her

I am eighteen and she is a couple of years younger. She can dance. I can't, but want to. Should I ask her to taech me?

Boston. BOBBIE B.

I think it was just a case of bad manners. "Bobbie B." Manners are about the last thing a girl learns these days. Politeness demanded that she thank you for your courtesy in entertaining her, whether she enjoyed it or not. It was also bad form to talk about herself so much, but that is the favorite topic of many people. If she is only fifteen or sixteen she probably is thoughtless or ignorant. If you like her I should overlook this lapse on her part. Ask her to teach you to dance, by all means. There is no reason why you shouldn't.

Here's Food for Thought, Friends

Dear Miss Atkins:

I AM a woman of twenty-four. I have been living with a man for eight years. He has promised to marry me, but has not kept his word. Once I loved him, but I don't any more. He has made me hate him. I cannot go out without his insegning that I am running after somebody. God knows I don't give him any reason to think this.

But this is only one of his faults He is a rascal. Miss Atkins, would you advise me to stay with him until he marries me, which I doubt if he ever will do, or should I leave him?

My folks think I am married, that is why I stay with him. He says if I leave him he'll kill me and himself. Do you think he would do such a thing?

For God's sake, try to help me. I am suffering. I am supposed to be a Catholic, so you can imagine my feelings. Please answer as quickly as possible, for I can't stand this any longer.

Boston. BESSIE.

I think you are perfectly safe in taking a chance on your man's NOT killing you. Every once in a while some man does carry out such a threat, but when you think of the millions of threats made you have a pretty sure chance of safety. We say we "wish we were dead," and we may even threaten suicide, but you know, "Bessie," when it comes right down to severing the thread of life it is easier to live. To face the unknown in familiar surroundings is simpler than to face the unknown in unfamiliar surroundings. We may not know what the future has in store for us, but we know where the trolleys take us, and the names of the streets and a good many people.

I wouldn't wait for the man to marry you, and if you don't leave him you wouldn't want to marry him anyway. As for your conscience, you won't have any peace of mind until you make your peace with your God. You can only do that through your church.

Summer is coming. The grass is green, and the birds are singing. Go to a convent for a few days, until you find yourself. Your sisters will help you. After that, start afresh with a cleansed heart and mind and a new outlook on life. You won't know peace until you do.

CAN A GIRL AND A FELLOW BE REAL PALS?

Dear Miss Atkins:

CAN a girl and a fellow be real pals?

A girl whom I know is engaged to another fellow takes as much of my time as I can give her. She calls me on the telephone at my home, at the club, writes me letters and waits for me on street. In fact, she says she is the most miserable of girls and if it were not for my friendship she would end it all. I spend a good deal of money on her and she never hesitates to ask for what she wants. Now, the fellow she is engaged to knows very little of this and would not like it if he did.

I really like this girl and enjoy her company but as she is engaged to another what I am I gaining? The time she keeps me away from girls I might be going with and not only that, it is causing talk.

Since my return from France I have been much disappointed in some of our young ladies.

Ex-Service Man.

Auburn, Me.

I am afraid some of us are a bit disappointed in you, "Ex-service Man," after reading your frank letter. An unwritten law is that one man shall not go with another chap's girl, especially if the latter is engaged. And you think he wouldn't like it? Isn't that sufficient reason why you should be white? As for the girl, that type will find consolation somewhere else, but don't you be a rotter.

THE BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER will pay $1.00 for each letter printed.

This feature appears each day in The Boston Daily Advertiser.

IN my home there lives a bachelor shoemaker, who is forever asking me to mend something or write letters or do errands for him. One day recently I did some work for him that took me the best part of the morning. The shoes I was wearing had a rip in them. He told me to bring them to his shop and have them sewed. I did so and he charged me a dime!

CHAMPION CAMEL IN FRENCH FILM

MER-EL-HAKJ is one of the most prominent actors in the cast of "Missing Husbands," the spectacular French photoplay to be shown at Loew's Orpheum all this week.

His fame is just beginning to spread over the United States through the medium of the picture. It would have spread long ago had there been any interest here in camel racing.

Mer-el-Hakj, or Feet of the Wind, is a camel. In the Eastern world his fame corresponds to that of Man-o'-War. In a series of camel races held in Cairo, Tunis, Algiers and Morocco, Mer-el-Hakj has shown his heels to the fastest camels of the desert. He is the greatest of four-footed distance racers, easily outrunning a horse over a course more than two miles in length.

This famous animal was obtained by the French producers of the picture for screening the scenes of the flight across the Sahara, when the camel, bearing the captive French officer, carries him to safety.

SCREEN SCRIBBLES

Homer Scott, cameraman for Mabel Normand in the making of the Mack Sennett production, "Suzanna," is recovering from a bruised head, skinned nose and badly wrenched shoulder suffered in a fall when his horse stepped into a gopher hole while on location with the Normand company.

Katherine MacDonald, beautiful star of "Preferred Pictures," who is making "White Shoulders," is scheduled to go on location this week with her supporting cast.

Wesley Barry, diminutive star of Marshall Neilan productions, is now in the South on a personal appearance tour throughout the principal cities of the nation. He will return to Hollywood in about two weeks.

RIDDLES CENSOR BOARD MEDDLING

Harvey Cummings, who is something of a literary authority and a keen student of the possibilities of the photodrama, is an ardent admirer of Kipling, and he resents the screen defacement of "The Ballad of Fisher's Boarding House," a creation hailed as a "classic of stark, elemental life," by such amateurs as Henry James and William Dean Howells, but presented under the chatisement of "proper" eliminations by the New York censor. He writes:

"Quite the most ridiculous act of the censors to date (I still have hope that they'll do even (worse) was in their cutting of the Kipling poem, 'Fisher's Boarding House.' The poem has been popular for years, has never been known to directly drive any one to perdition or riot, and who are the censors, anyhow, to pass upon Kipling?

"In the first place, Anne is shown to be a rather loose-looking creature in the picture, but evidently the censor didn't so much mind her being loose in person as being loose in a caption. As a matter of fact, a caption was necessary to point out to unreasonable minds that Anne was not a person after which to pattern one's self. It is much more harmful to allow folks to believe that Anne was just one of us, rather than point out that she was no better than she should be.

"I am also informed that another bit eliminted from the picture showed a sailor driving a knife into a table. I am curious to know just how the censors figure that as scene of that sort can impair one's morals. And what right have they to eliminate the scene if it doesn't impair one's morals? And, of course, we all know that they haven't the right—but have they the power to commit such acts?

"Certain it is that the motion pictures will never get beyond the crudest stage of development if they are to be hindered in their progress by this board which has set itself up as a criterion. Are we to have none of the classics as the authors gave them to us in printed form? Are all our movies to be fit for only six-year-old minds? Is our great nation to be 'educated' by these films which, when lopped off by the censor, are about as educational as a nursery rhyme?"

OLD HOMES AND NEW

Papa Binswanger (Dore Davidson) is horrified by the suggestion of his daughter (Vivianne Osborne) that he leave his comfortable country homestead for the stilted luxury of hotel life in the city. An episode from "The Good Provider," Cosmopolitan Production, which tomorrow enters its third week at the Park. Fannie Hurst wrote the story, and the cast includes Vera Gordon, William Collier, Jr., and little Miriam Battista.

NEWS NOTES OF CHIVALRY FILM

Three thousand yards of ribbon were used on the costumes of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," the Cosmopolitan Production starring Marion Davies, which will be released in the Fall. Costumes cost nearly one hundred thousand dollars. A big staff of seamstresses and designers was kept busy for months on them.

George Henry, a French wood carver, made all the intricate carving for the elaborate sets of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Everything had to be exactly right, and George sometimes spent an hour carving a single fleur-de-lis which was to grace the arm of a throne. It took him three months to complete his work.

A beautiful garden scene which has all the effect of sunlight and shadow and of gently waving tree tops, but which was made entirely indoors, makes a unique departure in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." This is the first time in the history of the screen that a tapestry motion picture has been made entirely within studio walls.

Mrs. Harry Wheeler, head of the costuming department of Cosmopolitan Productions, ran a freshly sharpened lead pencil through the palm of her hand when she suddenly noticed that King Henry VIII. had his royal shirt on wrong side out—just as it was time for the cameras to start grinding. This was the second casualty of the picture, one of the property men having been kicked by a horse used in the tilting tournament.

THIS PICTURE IS REALLY "COLORFUL"

"The Light in the Dark," Hope Hampton's latest starring vehicle for Associated First National release, promises to furnish a real novelty for patrons of the cinema. One of its unusual features is a reel in color, depicting the story of the quest of the Holy Grail. Handcolored by an artist, these scenes were produced from the famous Abby paintings on exhibition in the Boston Public Library. "The Light in the Dark," which was directed by Clarence L. Brown, is declared to be a screen triumph for Miss Hampton.

HEN RIGHT AT HOME

By a queer coincidence, Henry B. Walthall, one of the stars in "One Clear Call," a new John M. Stahl production for First National release, is from the same section of Alabama that furnishes the locale for the story. Frances Nimmo Greene, author of the book upon which the picture is based, is also a native of that State.

Atlantic Club To Co-operate With Men's

THE Atlantic Women's Club will holds the last meeting of the year on Monday evening. The evening is in charge of Mrs. Temple Winslow.

On Wednesday, from 5:30 to 7:30, the club will give a large banquet, which is its annual June supper. The supper is in charge of Mrs. Walter Benson, who is assisted by a large committee.

This supper is the beginning of a series of events to be given by the Atlantic Women's Club and the Men's Atlantic Improvement Association for the purpose of raising funds for the upkeep of our club house.

When Gloria Swanson, Paramount star, arrived in London recently Punch made a rather neat jest about her arrival. It pointed out that she arrived the last Monday after a rather rough voyage across the Atlantic, but it is understood that there was no report that she cabled home to America the following message: "Sick transit. Gloria. Monday."

"The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," starring Harry Myers, is completed after many weeks of intensive work at Universal City. It is one of the most interesting and significant motion picture enterprises because it introduces a new kind of serial film, based on classic adventure. Each installment is a complete story.

FILM DIRECTOR AIDED BY WIFE

The stage-ors of past generations, who wonder what has become of the old stars who entertained Bostonians a generation or two ago, will see six of these old stars at Gordon's Olympia this week. They are "Corinne," who will be remembered for her wonderful performances in "45 Minutes from Broadway," "Pinafore" and other stage successes; Barney Fagan, famous minstrel star; Lizzie Wilson; Joseph J. Sullivan; Tony Williams and Little Mae Kennedy, all favorites and celebrities of a decade or two ago.

These stars, who have come from retirement for another season before the footlights, have produced a delightfully novel playlet entitled "A Breath of Old Times." It is a revival of much that entertained our grandparents, and it revives once-popular song hits.

POSSIBLY YOU CAN BELIEVE THIS ONE

Recently Ruth Roland was told this "True Snake Story" by an officer friend who had just returned after a sojourn of several years in the Tropics. It was an incident of his call on an old friend, who had a small home away off in the jungle.

One afternoon, while seated with his host in the patio, imbibing a cooling drink, he heard a scraping, shuffling sound. Imagine his horror when an immense boaconstrictor came slowly through the door.

However, his host "turned not a hair nor even batted a single eyelash," but in a stern voice commanded: "Pete, get out of here, you know you're not allowed in the house," and sure enough, "Pete" sheepishly crawled back into the depths of the jungle to join his monkey and parrot companions.

WOMAN'S PUZZLE

In "The Ordeal," showing this week at Gordon's Scollay Square, Agnes Ayres portrays a woman perplexed by the great problem of the fair sex—love or riches?

A ROUND TRIP

Robert Vignola, director for Cosmopolitan, is planning on a trip around the world in January. Mr. Vignola, who is a native Italian, plans to go over the same ground which he traveled as an actor with the Kalem Company back in the good old days of picture pioneering.

The director at that time was a member of the cast "From the Manger to the Cross." He helped make pictures in London, Egypt, Italy, France, Turkey and southwestern Asia.

COSMO TO HAVE A BUSY SUMMER

Tentative plans for a busy summer of motion picture productions are being worked out in the Cosmopolitan Studios.

According to Verne Porter, editor-in-chief of the scenario department, plans are under way to feature Lionel Barrymore in one of the Boston Blackie series by Jack Boyle. "The Face in the Fog."

"Enemies of Women," by Vincente Ibanes will in all probability get under way about August 1, under the direction of Robert Vignola.

One of the greatest novels of the year, which caused considerable comment when it ran serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is that written by Peter B. Kyne, "The Pride of Palomar." This novel will be adapted for the screen, and will be shot right on the same Californian location where Mr. Kyne laid the settings of his story.

Members of the cast of the "Valley of Silent Men" the story by James Oliver Curwood, have returned from Banff, Canada, where scenes in the Canadian Rockies were made. The picture is being filmed under the direction of Frank Borzage. Alma Rubens and Lou Cody are being featured.

Marion Davies, star of Cosmopolitan, will begin work in her next picture, "Little Old New York," within the next few months. The comedy appeared on Broadway last year.

A NUTTY GIFT

Robert Vignola, director for Cosmopolitan Productions, has all the movie stars backed off the boards when it comes to receiving unique articles through the mail.

The director's mail recently held a huge cocoanut from the trees of Honolulu. The cocoanut was completely plastered on one side with postage stamps. The fruit was opened and divided among the camera men and prop boys.

GRACEFUL FILM

"Handle With Care," feature film this week at the Modern and Beacon, has Grace Darmond for its heroine.

OLD-TIMER BUSY

W. J. Ferguson, veteran stage and screen player who recently appeared in support of Wallace Reid in "The World's Champion," has been engaged for the cast of "To Have and to Hold," which George Fitzmaurice is soon to start for Paramount at the Lasky studio. Mr. Ferguson will replace Theodore Roberts, who was originally chosen for the part, but who will shortly start work in the leading role of "The Old Homestead." Betty Compson and Bert Lytell will head the cast of this special production based upon Mary Johnston's famous novel of American colonial days.

MANY STARS ON LOCATION WORK

The last few weeks have seen a great deal of location work on forthcoming Paramount Pictures being produced on the West Coast. The following are either on location or going shortly:

Betty Compson, doing "The Bonded Woman" at Balboa Beach, Cal.

Jack Holt in "The Man Unconquerable" also at Balboa.

Cecil B. DeMille producing "Manslaughter" with Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy, Lois Wilson and others in leading roles, at San Francisco.

George Melford, producing "Burning Sands" with Milton Sills and Wanda Hawley in the leading roles at Oxnard Cal., for desert scenes.

George Fitzmaurice at Lasky Ranch for scenes in his production of "To Have and To Hold" with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell.

Fred Niblo, at Lasky Ranch, for his production starring Rodolph Valentino, "Blood and Sand."

Even William de Mille who seldom goes away from the studio, has done several scenes at the ranch for "Nice People" with Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Conrad Nagle and Julia Faye.

Agnes Ayres in "Borderland" has been away to nearby locations on several occasions recently.

Penrhyn Stanlaws started his next production "Pink Gods" with James Kirkwood and Bebe Daniels, Ann Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Adolphe Menjou and others at Bruce Canyon.

Irvin Willat, making "The Sire Call" with Dorothy Dalton is in the Yosemite Valley.

Surprising the most sceptical, Phyllis Haver, the beautiful and talented comedienne of the Mack Sennett forces, in her first real effort to entertain from the speaking stage, created a decided hit in a little playlet written by Willard Mack for Bessie Turpin, Kathryn McGuire and herself, and put on at a Los Angeles theatre.

Odds and Ends About the Stage

By E. F. HARKINS.

GEORGE M. COHAN'S Summer musical show schedule for the Tremont has to all intents and purposes gone into the discard.

This is one of the two surprises he sprung the other night.

Monday, July 31, is the date now tentatively set for the premiere of "Little Nellie Kelly," and by that time another theatre season will be under way. "The Tavern" will continue running indefinitely; no one knows how long.

The second surprise is that the still boyish genius of the American stage is giving all his spare time to a new play. Some author was lucky enough to send along a manuscript with an idea that stirred the fertile and flashing Cohan imagination, and George M. probably won't stop until he has rebuilt it completely. Which was just what happened in the case of "The Tavern."

That play, in its original form, was brought to him by Brock Pemberton, play agent and producer, who said he thought it had a good part for Arnold Daly, then under contract with Cohan. All that is left of the original text is a line or two spoken by the vagabond. Cohan literally turned Cora Dick Gantt's play inside out and upside down; but the lady is being paid an author's royalty just the same. She has made a small fortune already out of "The Tavern," which is really a new play with a new title. And, according to George M., she will be earning royalties on the play for many years to come. It's a classic and he knows it. There's no false modesty about him.

He got the play one Friday afternoon. In the course of a few hours he had extracted the new idea from it and decided to accept it. A week from the following Monday "The Tavern" rehearsals started. Cohan thinks and works in flashes.

"SALLY" NOW AN INTERNATIONAL HIT

"Sally" is an international hit. In addition to the original company, headed by Marilynn Miller and Leon Errol, now at the Colonial, there are three companies on the British stage, one in London, a second in the English "provinces" and a third in Australia.

The London production, made under the direction of Grossmith and Malone, has been flourishing since the first of the year. George Grossmith is the principal comedian and Dorothy Dickson, a former "Follies" dancer, is playing the title role. She has developed, it seems, exactly like Miss Miller.

There is a report that Miss Dickson will be brought back to the United States to head a second American company. The company now here will visit Chicago and Philadelphia next season. When the Boston run is over the members will take a vacation. Miss Miller says she will welcome it. Doubtless the others will too. With a few exceptions they have been playing without a stop since December 21 1920.

The one role with repeated changes is that of Rosy, first played by Mary Hay and played here by Geneva Mitchell and Claire Miller. Now it is Faire Binney's turn. Delores, the original Mrs. Ten Brook, has also left Boston. Betty Williams, another stately beauty, took her place last week. Tomorrow night there will be a new Mrs. Ten Brook in the person of an English aristocrat piquantly named Felice.

BOSTON GIRL AND DANCING BARON

On the Keith bill this week is Baron Arsenian, described as "graceful Parisian society dancer and originator of the Parisian tango." This is turning out to be with a vengeance, for in the past the best professional dancers of the ballroom type in Paris have been Americans.

But the baron is Americanizing himself or his act. With him is a Boston girl, Frances Aldrich, granddaughter of Louis Aldrich, a favorite stage singer of the '90s. She was born and trained in this city and is very well known already to Bostonians who enjoy dancing.

Tango dancing is only one of her accomplishments. She is an accomplished ballerina and interpretative dancer. Anyway Miss Frenchman is lucky in his new partner.

The baron is bringing his own orchestra.

LION ALMOST "GETS" PEARL WHITE

An incident not down on the schedule, in which Pearl White had a narrow escape from death, occurred while the star was making scenes for "A Virgin Paradise," the picture billed at the Modern and Beacon.

The company went to Bermuda to make tropical scenes and took with them some wild animals that the story called for. Working lions for pictures are hard to get.

Jimmy was the lion with which Miss White worked. One day Miss White was romping in a cage with Jimmy. With the lion, but hidden from view, was his trainer, armed with a revolver and whip. Miss White, with a book in her hand, moved slowly toward the lion and began reading aloud, as required in one of the scenes, as the lion is supposed to be her pet in the screen story.

But there is no petting a lion. The beast growled and made as though to spring. The trainer sprang to his rescue just in time, and Jimmy was driven back to his cage.

Norumbega Park Is Drawing Crowds

WARMER weather has resulted in largely increased attendance at Norumbega Park, the pleasure resort on the Charles, at Auburndale. The many varied attractions provide excellent entertainment and recreation day and night. The trip to the park by trolley or automobile is one of the most beautiful in Massachusetts. Ample parking space for motorists is provided.

The restaurant offers tempting menus and there is dancing to the music of an excellent jazz orchestra. Zoological exhibits, free radio concerts and other unique attractions delight the crowd.

Each afternoon and evening, just before the vaudeville performances in the big outdoor theatre, Mlle. Mazie Lunetto performs her perilous slide from the top of the 400-foot water tower suspended by her teeth. Groups of people stand even on the hills outside the park to watch her descent and applaud it.

Several new features are in preparation for what promises to be the greatest season on record at Norumbega.

"We Americans do not laugh as easily as some foreigners, particularly foreigners of the Latin countries," declared "Bozo," "and if you don't think it's hard to make an average audience of Americans laugh, go on the stage and try it some time. They'll applaud any sensational or dramatic stuff, but to get them chuckling is another matter."

MODERN AND BEACON

Pearl White, whose beauty and daring have made her one of the world's most renowned film stars, heads the bill this week at the Modern and Beacon in "A Virgin Paradise." She has the role of a daughter of nature, who has lived since infancy on an isolated South Sea Island. Meeting with adventurers from the realms of civilization, she is drawn into contact with human society. Miss White has not been seen here on the screen for a long while, and her appearance in this picture constitutes a real event in the photoplay world. "Han'le With Care," a comedy featuring Grace Darmond, James Morrison, William Courtleigh and Patsy Ruth Miller, is also on the bill.

Creating Laughs Serious Task, Says "Bozo"

THE comedian has the hardest of all tasks in the theatrical profession, according to Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, pantomimist who is making thousands of Bostonians laugh while playing as the star of Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day," at the Gayety. When interviewed at the theatre yesterday, "Bozo" declared that actors playing dramatic or romantic roles have an easy life compared with the lot of a comedian whose bread and butter depend upon his ability to make people laugh.

"We Americans do not laugh as easily as some foreigners, particularly foreigners of the Latin countries," declared "Bozo," "and if you don't think it's hard to make an average audience of Americans laugh, go on the stage and try it some time. They'll applaud any sensational or dramatic stuff, but to get them chuckling is another matter."

"Han'le With Care," a comedy featuring Grace Darmond, James Morrison, William Courtleigh and Patsy Ruth Miller, is also on the bill.

BOWDOIN SQUARE

Drake and Walker's big colored musical revue entitled, "Bombay Girls," with 22 clever singing and dancing artists, will be the stellar attraction at the Bowdoin Square, beginning tomorrow. Cake walkers and jubilee singers will offer something of real worth. John Gilbert, newest picture star, will appear in "Cleam O'Dawn," a story of love and adventure in the Canadian woods. Johnny Hines will be seen in "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," which introduces in the cast: Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Betty Carpenter and J. Barney Sherry. "Go Get 'Em Hutch" and other features will also be offered.

BURLESQUE GIRL L STREET MERMAID

Nettie Nelson, prima donna of "The Broadway Beauties," the burlesque attraction at Waldron's, is an enthusiastic mermaid. Last week she was taken for a street by a girl friend who is a resident of Boston, and since then the burlesque favorite has become a "regular" at L street.

"In comparison with bathing places in other cities along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, L street is great," says the natatorial Nellie. "Swimming gives me a world of pep and ginger for the afternoon and evening shows. It is a splendid idea to have the beach exclusively for girls, fenced off from the men's side. That gives girls a chance to enjoy the more comfortable bathing suits that would be banned by fussy authorities if girls and men mingled at the beach."

FILM WILL MAKE LADIES LOOK LONGINGLY

Rich toilettes, lots of them, of the latest style, are a feature of "The Ordeal," Agnes Ayres' latest Paramount starring vehicle which is shown this week at Gordon's Scollay Square.

Miss Ayres interprets the part of a young widow who inherits a fortune, which she will lose if she marries again. Widows with money are expected to be well dressed, hence Miss Ayres' wardrobe in this picture is said to be a real delight to the feminine eye.

For instance, there's a pheasant-blue evening gown with opalescent sequins and crystal beads, finished with velvet to match. Specially striking are slippers and fan of blue pheasant feathers.

For motoring and street wear Miss Ayres has a molekskin suit and a gorgeous ermine wrap with an ermine toque trimmed with white toque feathers.

Simple but striking in its line is a dinner gown of taupe chiffon embossed in velvet flowers of the same tone. A striking walking dress is of navy blue faille brocaded in black satin.

Shows to Remain

TREMONT—"The Tavern" is one of the dramatic treats of the season. One reason for this is the wealth of satirical comedy with which George M. Cohan has invested the play. Another equally important reason is the capital performance, with Mr. Cohan himself in the principal role. Fourth week.

COLONIAL—"Sally," Ziegfeld's blue ribbon musical comedy production, is still delighting all sorts of playgoers. Marilynn Miller and Leon Errol, the stars, have with them Walter Catlett, Irving Fisher, Phil Ryley, Frank Kingdon and other admirable entertainers. Seventh week.

GAYETY THEATRE

Continuing a wonderfully successful run in Boston, Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day" will remain as the burlesque attraction at the Gayety this week.

Since this elaborate production came to the Hub, the theatre has been filled to capacity at all performances and seat reservations are still being made far ahead. Praise of the gorgeous show has spread far and wide, and everyone demands an opportunity to see it before it moves on to New York city. Among the many reasons for the success of "Follies of the Day" are the splendid scenic effects, costumes and lighting; the inimitable fun of Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, "the man who never speaks," and the large cast, including Johnny Webber, Sam Green, Mae Dix, Gertrude Tayes, jr., and Julia De Cameron.

TREMONT TEMPLE.

"Your Best Friend," starring Vera Gordon, known for her marvelous portrayal of mother roles on the screen, enters the second week of its engagement at Tremont Temple tomorrow afternoon. This photoplay which has been shown to large audiences during the past week, is a truly remarkable film. It shows Miss Gordon as the living incarnation of true motherhood. The cast supporting Miss Gordon is one of much excellence, including Harry Benham, as the eldest son; Stanley Price as the youngest son; Belle Bennett, as the son's wife; Beth Mason, as the latter's mother, and Dore Davidson, as Murrie, the family bookkeeper.

Noted Actress Once in Role Of Old Man

VERA GORDON, whose latest picture, "Your Best Friend," is now playing twice daily at Tremont Temple has played mother roles ever since her first engagement in a stock company. In addition to being much old before her time, Miss Gordon claims the distinction of playing the part of an old man, in an opera called "Bulamif." The entire cast was made up of women. The older women played the old men parts, and the younger played young men and women roles.

"I took the part of an old man," said Miss Gordon. "I sang bass, as befitted the old man. When I spoke my lines a gale of laughter swept across the footlights, for they had discovered me behind the guise of a flowing beard and voluminous robes."

In her latest picture, Miss Gordon reveals one of the most poignant phases of mother love ever screened. Belle Bennett, Harry Benham, Beth Mason, Stanley Price and Dore Davidson are the other prominent members of the cast.

PARK THEATRE

"The Good Provider," one of the most compelling human-life documents ever presented on the screen, will continue this week at the Park in response to popular demand. This will constitute the third week of the picture, which is a Cosmopolitan production, based on Fannie Hurst's fascinating story of real people. Directed with marvellous fidelity to actual existence by Frank Borzage, and with Vera Gordon and Dore Davidson in the leading roles, the film has captivated Boston.

Pops Programs For Sixth Week

THE Pop concerts at Symphony Hall are now running into the sixth week of what is assured to be the best season the Pops have ever had.

Agide Jacchia and the Pops Symphony Orchestra, famous the country over, will present during the coming week a fine set of programs. Tomorrow will bring a Russian-Tschaikovsky program. On Tuesday night Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture, Dvorak's Largo from the "New World" Symphony, and Wagner's prelude to "The Mastersingers" will be featured. Wednesday will be Technology night, but open to the public. On Thursday the "William Tell" overture, "Aida" Fantasia, "Elli, Elli" and Cassila's rhapsody, "Italia" will be played; on Friday "The Bartered Bride" and "Oberon" overtures, the "Jewels of the Madonna" fantasia, "Love Death" from "Tristan" and "Coppelia" suite. On Saturday there will be three new numbers, an arrangement which Mr. Jacchia has made of the three negro folk songs, "Burry Me in de East," "Musieu Banjo" and "Nobody Knows de Trouble I've Seen," Verdi's "Jeanne d'Arc" overture, and the intermezzo from Puccini's latest opera, "Suor Angelica."

NATIONAL THEATRE

The National Theatre continues its tremendous popularity under its new policy. Manager Smith, who is now in charge of this capacious theatre, has arranged another attractive program for the coming week, with such stars appearing as Douglas Fairbanks, Lionel Barrymore, Bebe Daniels, Bert Lytell and Gladys Walton.

Changes of Bill At Various Theatres

THIS week's novelties are confined to vaudeville and pictures. Of the big houses only the Colonial and Tremont now remain open. Summer parks and excursions are beginning to attract the crowd.

B. F. KEITH'S

Baron Arsenian, graceful society dancer, and originator of the Parisian tango, will make his vaudeville debut at Keith's this week. He will be assisted by Miss Frances Aldrich, Boston's own Queen of the Dance. Emilie Lea, a star new to the Hub, will appear with her company in "Rehearsing for Vaudeville," an act described as almost a complete vaudeville show in itself. Other unusual features include Sylvia Clark, Wilfred Clark and company, the Sharrocks, Joe Darcey, Kay Hamlin and Kay, and Markel and Gay. A new issue of the popular Aesop's Fables, and the latest news weekly will complete the bill.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM

"Missing Husbands," a tremendous spectacular photoplay, is the headliner at Loew's Orpheum for the coming week. It is one of those rare picture-plays that embody in romance, thrills, adventure, pathos, passion, beauty and grandeur, with many of the scenes laid in the midst of the Sahara Desert. These settings are of overwhelming beauty and extravagance. In addition, a vaudeville bill of extraordinary merit will be offered, headed by a quintet of lively steppers in "A Dancing Whirl." Five other acts are also on the bill.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

"Stars of Yesterday," players who delighted the theatregoers of a generation ago, will appear in person at Gordon's Olympia this week in a unique act. These old-time stars include Corinne, once star of "Pinafore"; Barney Fagan, renowned minstrel; Lizzie Wilson, Joseph J. Sullivan, Tony Williams and Little Mac Kennedy. They will present bits of plays and songs that once delighted our grandparents. Other acts include Bob, Foster and Joyce in "Bits of Versatility," and Herman and Shirley in a surprising comedy novelty, "The Mysterious Masquerader." The feature photoplay will be "The Woman He Married," with Anita Stewart.

LOEW'S STATE

Patrons of Loew's State during the coming week will see "The Man From Home," adapted from the famous novel by Booth Tarkington. The story is interpreted by a capable cast headed by James Kirkwood and Anna Q. Nilsson. The picture blends thrills, suspense, heart interest and beauty of settings. Another feature of exceptionally entertaining qualities is Viola Dana in "They Like Them Rough," a vehicle giving Miss Dana ample opportunity to display her charm. The story has much humor. The latest Educational comedy and pictorial weekly complete the bill.

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQ.

Comedy, harmony, dancing, drama and gymnastic exhibitions will be included in the vaudeville at Gordon's Scollay Square this week. The headline act is Bobbs and Nelson, in "His Girl." Other acts are Stella Tracey and Carl McBride, musical comedy artists in "Bits of Exclusiveness"; Tom Brown's melody act, "Harmony and Music"; Jeanne La Crosse, soprano from California, and the Wilson Aubrey Trio, comedy gymnasts. Featuring the screen program will be "The Ordeal," starring Agnes Ayres. There are several novel touches in "The Ordeal." The villain is disposed of in the first reel—but his influence hangs over the remainder of the picture.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

Beautiful settings and teamwork of the Boston Stock Company, plus the good fortune of the management in securing "Slippy McGee" for the second time, should for the next few weeks makes the St. James Theatre a very popular place. All who have come to appreciate the excellent work of Walter Gilbert, leading man with the Boston Stock Company, will want to see him as "Slippy McGee."

BOSTON THEATRE

Mildred Harris, in "The First Woman," is the feature for the Boston Theatre this week. The vaudeville is headed by Murray and Oakland in "Sublime and Ridiculous," and Dotson in "Lighting Steps and Laughs." McFarlan and Palace, and Elvia, with the usual screen feature, complete the bill.

WALDRON'S CASINO

A droll burlesque of current events, a film that tells a thrilling story and several splendid vaudeville acts make up the continuous three-in-one shows at Waldron's Casino this week. The attraction is billed "The Broadway Beauties." It is a recent production and has never before been seen in this city. The excellent cast of comedians includes Phil Ott and Ed Jordan. Miss Nettie Nelson is the prima donna. The feature motion picture is "When East Comes West," with Roy Stewart in the star role.

LANCASTER THEATRE

Two excellent photoplays head this week's bill at the Lancaster. Clara Kimball Young is pictured in the compelling story, "The Worldly Madonna," and Richard Talmadge gives his breezy personality and talent for comedy in "Taking Chances." As a special added attraction the Grace Hanlon Trio will be heard in a repertoire of old and new songs. The program on Thursday will offer Tom Moore in "Beating the Game," and Ethel Grey Terry in "Too Much Business."

Boston Manager Pays Tribute to State

THERE is just one way to keep the students of the American theatre on a high plane, according to George A. Giles, managing director for the Boston Stock Company. That way is to support the stock company with ideals.

"The stock company idea may be called provincial," says Giles, "for it is always a local affair. But this very characteristic makes it important in preserving the best traditions of the nation. For the stock company can be watched. It can be encouraged and developed. It reaches out with a steady influence which eventually must be felt by all. It can teach Americanism powerfully through the American play.

"Take, for example, 'Slippy McGee,' now playing its second engagement of the season here at the St. James. This play has proved so popular that we plan on keeping it here for an indefinite run. It is the story of a crook who comes in contact with the best American influences. This contact and its wholesome results, could hardly be better emphasized than through the living lesson of the stage.

"Slippy McGee, the lawbreaker, that Walter Gilbert portrays in our presentation of this play, is a crook feared by everyone. Then along comes the church and through its influence he is regenerated. This illustrates what I mean by saying that the stage is perhaps the greatest factor for good at the present day."

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ.

The Summer continuous performance policy at Gordon's Central Square will be marked the first three days of this week by the showing of the spectacular photoplay production "Fascination," starring Mae Murray. Among the other features will be the new Buster Keaton photoplay, "Cops." During the last part of the week there will be the amateur night and vaudeville.

GORDON'S STRAND

Constance Talmadge in her latest First National attraction, "Polly of the Follies," will begin a three-day run at Gordon's Strand tomorrow. Miss Talmadge has the role of Polly Meacham, a country girl, whose stage aspirations are tinged with a delicious sense of humor. Kenneth Harlan is Miss Talmadge's leading man in this production.

Gymnastic Queen Taught by Her Mother

FILM DIRECTOR HELPED BY WIFE

LILY LEITZEL, greatest of all aerial gymnasts, loves excitement. Hanging by one hand from a rope, this tiny person casts her body over her shoulder many scores of times without a pause. Her record is 116 revolutions.

In telling of her art, this most remarkable woman athlete says:

"If I don't work for a week and then go through my act there is not a muscle that does not ache unbearably. I must work continually to keep fit. I cannot afford to take vacations or I throw away the result of years of training. Constant practice is the price of perfection, and I dote on the excitement of the big tent.

"My brother and I are the only people who can perform this feat, and mother is now retired. She was famous in Europe and lives here now. I grew up doing stunts."

Miss Leitzel is one of more than 100 performers who will be seen here with Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows, coming to Boston next week.

As on several previous occasions, George Fitzmaurice shared the honors of the direction in his latest Paramount Production, "The Man From Home," with his wife, Guida Bergere, who made the screen adaptation of the famous Booth Tarkington novel. The picture will be shown at Loew's State this week.

Mrs. Fitzmaurice accompanied her husband to Italy to film exteriors. During the first week of their stay in Rome, work was held up by riots and bad weather. "Flis," however, was determined to get his picture finished within the scheduled time, so while he was occupied with one group of actors, his wife was directing a second unit, sometimes only a stone's throw from her husband's own particular "set-up."

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzmaurice every evening go over the scenes to be "shot" the following day. Their artistic ideas are so much alike that it would be impossible for anybody to distinguish which scenes have been directed by Fitzmaurice and which by his wife and co-director.

The most famous family in the films is having something akin to a family reunion. Producer Joseph M Schenck, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Natalie Talmadge and Buster Keaton are all in Hollywood and all "between pictures."

THE SHEIK

By E. M. HULL

A FLAMING ROMANCE OF DESERT LOVE

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

SHEIK AHMED BEN HASSAN, leader of an Arab tribe, determines to conquer the pride of a beautiful but haughty English tourist, DIANA MAYO, by capturing her and making her one of his slaves. The Sheik learns that Diana is planning to start a trip into the desert from Biskra in spite of the wishes of her brother,

SIR AUBREY MAYO, who has been her guardian since the death of her parents. Diana is wilful, and in spite of his repeated protests she arranges with a caravan leader to take her into the desert, where she is kidnaped by the Sheik and taken to his tent.

ZILAH, a maid assigned by the Sheik to attend Diana.

GASTON, valet to the Sheik.

YUSEF, lieutenant of the desert army.

RAOUL DE SAINT HUBERT, French novelist and lifelong friend of the Sheik.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

DIANA MAYO, young, disturbingly beautiful and unconscious of it, and the product of a unique upbringing in which she has always been treated as a boy, is getting ready to lead her own expedition into the desert.

She does this in the face of the advice of her brother, Sir Aubrey Mayo, and of men friends who realize that her beauty is so maddening that she cannot be safe unchaperoned in a caravan of natives.

But Lady Diana does not heed their advice.

The next day, after a bitter quarrel with her brother, Sir Aubrey, Diana again refuses to stop her trip. The caravan is signalled and she steps out with it, unchaperoned into the deep brown waste places of the desert.

The caravan leader, Mustafa Ali, tries to urge Diana to hasten her pace into the desert, and she becomes furiously angry and decides to teach him a lesson.

As they ride farther into the desert Diana notices that her guide is falling behind her and turns to find a troop of Arabs pursuing her. The leader rides abreast of her and sweeps her from her horse and takes her captive to his tent in the desert. It is the Sheik, Ahmed Ben Hassan, who makes violent love to Diana, and in spite of her rebuff, he forces his attentions upon her. The Sheik surrounds his captive with luxury and his servants are her willing slaves, but in spite of the attentions showered upon her she pines for association with people of her own race.

This craving is to be satisfied much sooner than Diana expects for the Sheik announces the coming of his friend, Raoul de Saint Hubert, a French novelist. The announcement does not please Diana the pleasure she had anticipated, because she has grown to love her captor, and resents the intrusion of a third person in their midst or fear that she may suffer for lack of companionship. She realizes for the first time that she was jealous. Saint Hubert comes and remonstrates with the Sheik for keeping Diana captive, and the novelist and Diana become fast friends.

Yusef brings a message that Ibraheim Omair and his robber band are at large.

Diana rides out into the desert and after a fight, in which Gaston is wounded, she is captured by Ibraheim Omair and taken to his harem.

Omair's favorite wife becomes jealous of Diana and Omair kills her after which he makes overtures to Diana. The Sheik, alarmed at the absence of Diana, rides out to Omair's camp and after a battle with Omair's men in which several of his own men are killed, he succeeds in wounding Omair and rescuing Diana but only after he is severely wounded. Diana and Saint Hubert bring him back to his tent. During the days that follow while the Sheik hovers between life and death, Saint Hubert tells Diana the story of his early life. Now go on with the story:

HE refused to see his father, refused to recognize that he was his father, and he left the house that afternoon and Paris that night, going straight back to the desert, taking with him Gaston, who had arranged some time before to enter his service as soon as his time in the cavalry was up. A letter that Lord Glencaryll wrote to him, addressed to Viscount Caryll, which is, of course, his courtesy title, begging for at least an interview, and which he gave us to forward, was returned unopened, and scrawled across the envelope: "Inconnu." Ahmed Ben Hassan had been a monomania, and he has never spoken a word of English.

"Later on, when we used to travel together, his obvious avoidance of English people was at times both awkward and embarrassing, and I have often had to go through the farce of translating into French or Arabic remarks made to him by English fellow travelers, that is, when he condescended to notice the remarks, which was not often.

"From the day he learned the truth about himself for two years we saw nothing of him. Then the old Sheik asked us to visit him. We went with some misgivings as to what Ahmed's reception of us would be, but he met us as if nothing had happened. He ignored the whole episode and never referred to it. It is a closed incident.

"The Sheik warned us that Ahmed had told him that any reference to it would mean the breaking off of all relations with us. But Ahmed himself had changed indescribably. All the lovable qualities that had made him so popular in Paris were gone, and he had become the cruel, merciless man he has been ever since. The only love left in him was given to his adopted father, whom he worshipped. Later I was allowed back on the old footing, and he always has been good to Gaston, but with those three exceptions he has spared nobody and nothing. He is my friend, I love him, and I am not telling you more than you know already."

Saint Hubert broke off and looked anxiously at Diana, but she did not move or meet his gaze. She was sitting with her hand still clasped over the Sheik's and the other one shading her face, and the Vicomte went on speaking: "It is so easy to judge, so difficult to understand another person's temptations. Ahmed's position has always been a curious one. He has had unique temptations, with always the means of gratifying them."

There was a longer pause, but still Diana did not move or speak.

"The curse of Ishmael had taken hold of me by then and I wandered continually. Sometimes Ahmed came with me; we have shot big game together in most parts of the globe. A few times he stayed with us in Paris, but never for long; he always wearied to get back to the desert.

"Five years ago the old Sheik died; he was an exceptionally good man, and would have lived years but for an accident which crippled him hopelessly and from which he died a few months afterwards. And nothing in my life during his illness was wonderful. He never left him, and since he succeeded to the leadership of his tribe he has lived continuously amongst his people, absorbed in them and his horses, carrying on the tradition and customs laid down by his predecessor and devoting his life to the tribe.

"They are like children exclusive, insatiable and measuring, and he has never dared to risk leaving them more than too long, particularly with the increasing unrest. Omair always in the background. He has never been able to seek relegation further afield than Aures or Ouargla—and until Ahmed stopped abruptly, cursing himself for a tactless fool.

"She could not fail to realize the significance of those visits to the gay, vicious little towns. The inference was obvious. His thoughtless words would only add to her misery. Her sensitive mind would shrink from the contamination they implied. If Ahmed was going to use, she would be sensate enough without forcing on her knowledge of unworthiness of the man she loved. He pushed my chair back impatiently and went to the open doorway. He felt that she wanted to be alone. She watched him go, then slipped to her knees beside the couch.

She had realized the meaning of Raoul's carelessly uttered words and they had hurt her poignantly, but it was no new sorrow. He had told her himself months ago, callously, brutally, sparing her nothing, extenuating nothing. She pressed her cheek against the hand she was holding. She did not blame him, she could only love him, no matter what his life had been. It was Ahmed as he was she loved, his faults, his vices were as much a part of him as his superb physique and the alternating moods that had been so hard to meet. She had never known him otherwise. He seemed to stand alone, outside the prescribed conventions that applied to ordinary men.

She could not think of him as an Englishman. The mere accident of his parentage was a factor that weighed nothing. He was and always would be an Arab of the wilderness. If he lived! He must live! He could not go out like that, his magnificent strength and fearless courage extinguished by a treacherous blow that had not dared to meet him face to face—in spite of the overwhelming numbers—but had struck him down from behind, a coward stroke.

He must live, even if his life meant death to her hopes of happiness; that was nothing compared with his life. She loved him well enough to sacrifice anything for him. If he only lived she could bear even to be put out of his life. It was only he that mattered, his life was everything. He was young, so strong, so made to live. He had so much to live for. He was essential to his people. They needed him. If she could only die for him.

In the days when the world was young the gods were kind, they listened to the prayers of hapless lovers and accepted the life that was offered in return. One
